REV. RICHARD MORRIS, LL.D.,

HONORARY M.A. OXFORD,

PRESIDENT OF THE PHILOLOGICAL SOCIETY, LONDON,

Author of " Historical Outlines of English Accidence," Editor of " Old English Homilies," " Cursor Mundi," etc.

SECOND EDITION.

PREFACE.

THE present treatise has been drawn up at the urgent request of numerous teachers, who asked for an easier and more elementary work than my "Historical Outlines of English Accidence," published some two years ago. I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to produce a short historical grammar that might be advantageously used as an introduction to my larger book.

I have not, however, made a new book by cutting down and compressing the old one. These "Elementary Lessons" constitute an entirely independent work, with many peculiarities of arrangement that at once distinguish it from the "Accidence."

A reference to the earlier chapters alone will at once show how very different the two books are. The illustrative examples scattered throughout the present work are for the most part new, very few of them having been quoted elsewhere.

I trust that, to those engaged in the higher education of boys and girls, these lessons will prove helpful in promoting a more thorough knowledge of our "mother tongue," the study of which has of late years been put on a better footing, and has acquired a distinct, and by no means an unimportant, place in the curriculum of a liberal education

Syntax is not treated of in this volume, but I hope before long to be able to get out both a small and a large book on this important subject.

My best thanks are due to my kind friend, the Rev. W. W. Skeat, for his assistance in revising the proof-sheets. At his suggestion I have adopted the classification of the periods of the Language on p 33, and the mnemonics on p. 48

CHAPTER I.

I.—Relation of English to the Languages of Europe and Asia.

ENGLISH BELONGS TO THE INDO-EUROPEAN FAMILY OF LANGUAGES.

1. Most of the nations of Europe, and some in Asia, (India, Persia, Afghanistan,) have sprung from one common stock, and are therefore related to one another, by blood and by language.

2. These nations philologists have called the Indo-European or Aryan family.

The ancestors of the Aryan race once lived together in the highlands north of the Himâlaya mountains.

A time came, of which history gives us no account, when the old Aryan tribes separated from each other,
and left their ancient abode to seek new settlements.

Two great tribes, the old Hindus and the Persians, crossed the Himâlaya mountains, and found new homes on the banks of the Ganges and Indus, from whence they soon spread over Hindostan, Persia, &c.

The rest of the Aryan tribes, at different times, and at considerable intervals, travelled westward and came into Europe.

3. The first Aryan comers were the Kelts, who settled in parts of Germany, Italy, Spain, Gaul, and the British Isles. Their dialects still survive in Wales, the Highlands of Scotland, Ireland, the Isle of Man, and in Armorica or Brittany.

The Kelts were driven out of their settlements in Italy, and pushed further westward by the advance of the Italic tribes.

About the same time the peninsula of Greece was peopled by the Hellenic or Grecian tribes.

Next came the Teutons, who took up their abode in Germany and Scandinavia. The last Aryan settlement was made by the Lithuanians and Slavonians.

The Slavonians gradually spread themselves over Russia, Bohemia, Poland, &c.

The Lithuanians settled on the Baltic coast in Prussia, Livonia, and Lithuania.

4. Of the people living in Europe the Fins, Lapps, Esths, Basques, Hungarians, and Turks, do not belong to the Indo-European family.

II. Relation of English to the Teutonic Group.

ENGLISH IS A TEUTONIC LANGUAGE, AND BELONGS TO THE LOW-GERMAN DIALECTS.

. 6. The Teutonic group is that with which we are more nearly connected, English being one of its most important members.

There are three great divisions of the Teutonic people, (1) Low-German, (2) Scandinavian, (3) High-German.

The Low-Germans formerly lived near the low-lying lands, by the mouths of the rivers Rhine, Weser, and Elbe.

. The Scandinavians, probably an off-shoot from the Low-Germans, settled in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and at a later period in Iceland

The High-Germans lived inland, in the highlands south of Germany (Bavaria, &c)

7. The word Dutch, now only applied to the people of Holland, formerly denoted all German-speaking people. The Germans still call themselves Deutsche, and their language Deutsch.

8 The word Dutch is an adjective signifying national,[1] and was the name by which the old Teutons called themselves in contradistinction to other people, whose language they were unable to understand. They styled themselves the (intelligible) people, but called others, as the Romans, and the Kelts in Britain, Walsch and Welsh Ancient nations gave themselves polite names, b... s... c... ... ... their name from Slavo, a word or renown.

9. English belongs to the Low-German division of the Teutonic languages. Its nearest living relations are Dutch (the language of H... ... / ... ... the court language of Brabant), Frisian (between the Scheldt and Jutland and on the islands near the shore), Plat-Deutsch (on the Baltic coast), Gothic (the language of the Goths in the ancient province of Dacia) is a dead language. The Gothic translation of the Gospels by Wulfila or Ulfilas (in the fourth century) is the oldest monument of Teutonic literature extant The old Saxon is also a dead language ; it was once spoken between the Rhine and the Elbe in Munster, Essen, and Cleves.

CHAPTER II.

History of the English Language.

Origin of the English.

11. The English language was brought into Britain about the middle of the fifth century by Low-German tribes, commonly known as Angles, Saxons, and Jutes (Frisians).

, These Teutonic invaders were known to the Britons as Saxons, but they called themselves English (Æng-lisc), and their new home England (Ængla-land, the land of the Angles).

The term Angle or Engle is supposed by some to take its name from the district of Angeln in the Duchy of Schleswig.

12. The Frisians or Jutes settled in Kent; the Angles in the north, east, and central parts of Britain; and the Saxons in the south and west parts of the island (in Essex, Sussex, Wessex, &c.)

The Lowlands of Scotland once formed part of the old Northumbrian kingdom, hence Lowland-Scotch is an English dialect.

Foreign Elements in English.

ENGLISH WAS ORIGINALLY AN INFLECTED AND UN-MIXED LANGUAGE, BUT IS NOW AN UNINFLECTED AND COMPOSITE LANGUAGE.

13. The language that was brought into Britain by the Low-German invaders, was an inflected and synthetic language, like its congener Modern German, and its more distant relatives, Sanskrit, Greek, and Latin.

Though modern English has lost most of the older grammatical endings, and has been reduced to an analytical language (like Danish, French, and Persian), it still belongs, by virtue of its descent, to the family of inflected languages.

14. The English language brought over by the Angles, Saxons, &c., was an unmixed language.

There were no non-Teutonic elements in its vocabulary.

It is now a composite or mixed language, having adopted words from various nations with whom the English people have had dealings at different times

The foreign elements in English may therefore be treated historically.

I.—The Keltic Element in English.

15. The English invaders of Britain displaced the old Keltic inhabitants, and did not largely mix with them ; their language was, therefore, but little influenced by the speech of the British tribes. It affected the spoken far more than the written language, for from the ninth to the twelfth century English literature furnishes but few examples of borrowed Keltic terms.

The words of this period are barrow (mound), brock, breeches, clout, crock, kiln, cradle, mattock, pool.

   In the literature of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries we find more frequent traces of Keltic terms, of which the following still survive :—boast, boisterous, bribe, cam (crooked), crag, dainty, darn, daub, fleam, glen, havoc, kiln, mop, pillow.

   16. The Norman-French contained some few Keltic terms borrowed from the old Gaulish , some of these found their way into English, as : bag, barren, bargain, barter, barrel, basin, basket, bonnet, bucket, bran, button, chemise, car, cart, dagger, gravel, gown, harness, marl, mitten, motley, osier, pot, rogue, ribbon, varlet, vassal, wicket.

   17. A few words, the names of Keltic things, are of recent i: 'r.' .·' r'· r۰, ۰r.n٠·٠i, ٠٠٠d, i٠٠٠ b٠·.c.n, ٠٠٠٠, ٠٠ ,٠٠٠٠١٠· ٠٠٠ whiskey.

   18. The oldest geographical names are of course Keltic, especially names of rivers and of mountains ;
as, Avon, Ouse, Esk, Exe, Usk, Thames, Derwent, Dee, &c., Pen-y-Gent, Helvellyn, &c., Aberdeen, Kent, Dover, &c.

II.—The Scandinavian Element in English.

   19. Towards the end of the eighth century (A.D.
787) the Northmen of Scandinavia (Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Iceland) commonly known as Danes, made descents upon the East coasts of England, Scotland, the Hebrides, and Ireland, as well as in other parts of Europe.

In the ninth century they obtained a permanent footing in the North and East parts of England: and in the eleventh century a Danish dynasty was established on the throne for nearly thirty years (A.D. 1016–1042).

The Scandinavians were a Teutonic people and their language very closely resembled the old English speech. It is, therefore, no easy matter to determine the exact number of words introduced by the old Northmen. Many of the borrowed words have taken an English form, so as to be no longer distinguished as pure Scandinavian. The spoken language was affected by the Danes far more than the written language, especially in Northumberland, Durham, Yorkshire, Lancashire, Cumberland, Lincoln, and Norfolk, where many Danish words are still to be found. In the eleventh and twelfth centuries only a few Scandinavian words found their way into the written language, such words are, aren, are, by, a town; fel, a hill; til, to.

In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries they became more common and are easily discernible ; many of these still survive, as blunt, bole (of a tree), bound (for a journey), busk, buckle-to (buskle), cake, call, cast, curl, cat, dairy, die, daze, droop, fellow, fist, fro, froward, gab, gast, ill, irk- (some), kid, kindle, loft, low (flame), neave (fist), muck, odd, puck, plough, root, same, scold, sly, shy, tarn (lake), ugly (E E. ugge, to fear), weak, gar
(to cause, make), greet (to weep), are used by Spenser.

20 Very many Norse words once very common in old Northern writers have gone out of use, or have become provincial, as, at,
to (before infinitives) beck (stream), scrr (scar), last (fault), ht, (-thun), layte (to seek), mun (must, shall), trine (to go), tyne (to lose), tynsel (loss), throp or thorp (town), &c

21. Many names of places ending in by (town), fell (hill) byrk (stream), firth (wood), garth (circles &c), indicate British settlements, forth is the Scandinavian fjord (cp. Milford, Waterford)

22. The Danish invasions did much to unsettle the inflexions in the North of England. Before the Norman-French conquest we find the n of the infinitive falling off, and the verb in the third person singular present indicative ending in es instead of eth. The use of the plural suffix in as was frequently extended to nouns that originally formed the plural by the suffix a or u. The dialects of the North and North-East of England in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries are almost as flexionless as modern English. These parts of England were the last to come under the influence of Norman-French.

III.—The Latin Element in English.

1. LATIN OF THE FIRST PERIOD: connected with the Roman Invasion.

23. The Roman occupation of Britain for nearly four centuries (from A.D. 43 to A.D. 426) left its traces in the few names of places, as · Chester, Gloucester, Dorchester, Exeter, Stratton, Lincoln, &c.
Fortified towns and great roads became familiar objects to the old English settlers in Britain ; so castra, a camp, and strata, a street, soon passed into English under the forms ceastre = chester, and strǣt = street.
Probably portus, a port, as in Ports-mouth, was known to the oldest English. Cp. O.E port-gerefa, a port-reeve.

2. LATIN OF THE SECOND PERIOD: St. Augustine's Mission.

24. The introduction of Christianity about the end of the sixth century (A.D. 596) brought England into connection with Rome, and during the four following centuries a large number of Latin words became familiar to educated Englishmen.

The words introduced into the language during this period were, for the most part, connected with the Church, its services and observances, as : ancor, hermit (anchoreta) ; postol, apostle (apostolus) ; biscop, bishop (episcŏpus) ; calc, chalice (calix) ; clustor, cloister (claustrum) ; tunic, tunic (tunica).

(1) A few foreign articles now came in for the first time, and retained their Latin names.

(1) A few articles of food, clothing, ornaments, &c. : butor, butter (bŭtȳrum) ; cise, cheese (caseus) ; pæl, pall (pallium) ; tunic, tunic (tunica).

(2) Trees and Plants : cedar, cedar (cedrus) ; fic, fig (ficus) ; peru, pear (pirum) ; persuc, peach (persicum) ; lactuce, lettuce (lactuca) ; lilie, lily (lilium) ; pipor, pepper (piper) ; pisa, pease (pisum), &c.

(3) Animals : mere-greot, pearl (margaritta) ; camel, camel (camelus) ; culufre, dove (columba) ; leo, lion (leo) ; pard, leopard (pardus) ; ostre, oyster (ostrea) ; pawa, peacock (pavo) ; truht, trout (tructa) ; turtle, turtle (turtur) ; olfend (camel), a corruption of elephant.

(4) Weights: pund, pound (pondus), ynce, inch, ounce (uncia), &c.

(5) Miscellaneous: candel, candle (candela), disc, disk (discus), culter, coulter (culter), marman -(stan), marble stone (marmor); tæfl, table (tabula), mynet, mint (moneta).

,3. LATIN OF THE THIRD PERIOD: introduced by the Norman Conquest.

25. The Norman Conquest in 1066 was a remarkable event in the history of the English nation, and affected the language more than anything that happened either before or after it.

When the Normans made themselves masters of England they attempted to spread their language throughout the island. French became the language of the court and of the nobility: of the clergy and of literature: of the universities and schools: of the courts of law, and of Parliament: but French did not succeed in displacing English, for the great body of the common people refused to give up their mother-tongue, and from time to time there arose men who wrote in English for the benefit of those who knew nothing of French or Latin. After a while the Normans, being in the minority, mingled with the English and became one people   While the coalescence was taking place (in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries), there was a mingling of the two languages, and many French words found their way first into the spoken and afterwards into the written language.

After the distinction between Normans and English died out, Norman-French degenerated into a mere provincial dialect and at last ceased to be spoken in England.

In 1349 boys no longer learnt their Latin through the medium of French.

In 1362 (the 36th of Edward III.) English superseded French and Latin in the courts of law.

Certain political circumstances helped to bring about these changes, such as the loss of Normandy in John's reign, and the French wars of Edward III. (A.D. 1339).

Influence of Norman-French upon the Vocabulary of the English Language.

26. The Norman-French was essentially a Latin language, and the Norman Conquest added to English another very considerable Latin element

The introduction of French words was the work of some time, and went on gradually from the eleventh to the fourteenth century.

They came into the written language at first sparingly. In the Saxon Chronicle from 1086 to 1154, we find less than twenty Norman-French words —court, dub (1086), peace (1135), treasure, prison, justice, rent, privilege, miracle (1137), standard, empress, countess, tower (1140), procession (1154). A little before A D. 1200 we find, baron, chemise, custom, penance, palfrey, sot, jugler, master, mercy, manner, poor, riches, robbery, sacrament, charity, easy, font, sermon, passion, wait, saint, poverty, large, mantle, pride, service, spouse, taper, turn, &c.

Even at this early period we find hybrids: spus-had = marriage; crisme-cloth, maisterling = prince;

bispused, bespoused = married; almesful = charitable,
&c.

In Layamon's Brut (A.D. 1205), we find in the two versions less than one hundred words of French origin, among which we note especially, admiral, abbey, annoy, attire, astronomy, camp, change, chattel, chieftain, close, country, cope, crown, cross, cry, delay duke, escape, espy, false, fool, foul, grace, guile, guise, hardily, honour, hostage, hurt, ire, cable, legion, messenger, machine, male, mile, mountain, nun, nunnery, pilgrim, post, power, to roll, school, scorn, senator, serve, serving, sire, suffer, use,[1] &c.

27 Numerous French words were introduced into the language during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, by those native writers who for the first time translated religious treatises, poems, and romances, from the French into English. These compensated for the original imperfections of our language in religious, ethical, philosophical, and poetical terms;
besides giving us numerous words referring to war, chivalry, and the chase. Towards the middle of the fourteenth century, French influence upon the language was at its height.

28. Chaucer has been wrongfully accused of corrupting the written language of his day, by fresh importation of Romance words. In his translations he doubtless was compelled to employ many new terms for ideas and things, as yet unfamiliar to his countrymen; but his vocabulary is not more deeply tinged

[1] See the long list of French words in the "Ancren Riwle," "King Alexander" ("Hist. Outlines," pp. 339–344).

with French words than other writers of the fourteenth century. He, no doubt gave his authority to words already in general use, and rejected others in favour of native terms, and thus did much to fix the native vocabulary, and to stop the increasing inflow of borrowed words. It is said that not more than perhaps one hundred Romance words used by Chaucer in his various works have become obsolete.

"It is a great but very widely spread error to suppose that the influx of French words in the fourteenth century was due alone to poetry and other branches of pure literature. The Law, which now first became organized into a science, introduced many borrowed terms from the nomenclature of Latin and French jurisprudence; the glass-worker, the enameller, the architect, the brass-founder, the Flemish clothier, and the other handicraftsmen, whom Norman tastes and luxury invited, or domestic oppression expelled from the Continent, brought with them the vocabularies of their respective arts, and Mediterranean commerce—which was stimulated by the demand for English wool, then the finest in Europe—imported from the harbours of a sea where the French was the predominant language, both new articles of merchandize and the French designation for them. The sciences too, medicine, physics, geography, alchemy, astrology, all of which became known to England chiefly through French channels, added numerous specific terms to the existing vocabulary; and very many of the words first employed in English writings as a part of the technical phraseology of these various arts and know-ledges, soon passed out into the domain of common life, in modified or untechnical senses, and thus became incorporated into the general tongue of society and of books."[1]

29. But when the English vocabulary was thus increased by this great influx of French terms, many of the native words went out of use. Thus, if we take a thirteenth-century version of the Creed, we find skenned, conceived; spined was, suffered; lihte, descended; steih, ascended; imennesse of haluwen, communion of saints; ariste, resurrection. In a fourteenth-century copy (A D 1340) of the Lord's Prayer we find yeldinges, trespasses; yelderes, trespassers; vondinge, temptation; vri, deliver. Wickliffe has dettis, dettour, delyvere.[2] Tyndal (1526) has treaspasses, treaspas (verb) for dettis and dettours.

Many good old English words have gone out since Chaucer's time, having been replaced by Romance and Latin terms.

Influence of Norman-French upon the Grammar of English.

30. No language gives up its grammar and adopts a new system of borrowed inflexions for its nouns, adjectives, and verbs, &c.

It will part with the greater portion of its original vocabulary, and yet leave grammatical forms almost untouched. Norman-French words found an easy entrance into our language, but the influence of four centuries only served to modify and to diminish English inflexions, not to eradicate them by the substitution of new forms.

The Danish invasion had unsettled the language in many parts of the country, and in the eleventh century we see a disposition to adopt a less inflexional structure, and in the earlier periods. Nearly every nation of the Teutonic family has, by the loss of inflexions, become almost as uninflexional as our own[1] The tendency of all highly inflected or synthetical languages is to become analytical and non-inflexional, so that, had there been no Norman Conquest, we should have followed the ordinary growth of language, in replacing the older grammatical endings by the use of relational words, as, prepositions, auxiliaries, &c

Doubtless then the Norman invasion caused this change to take place more rapidly and generally, than it would otherwise have done, but even the slight direct modifications here spoken of are not found much before the fourteenth century.

31. The power of forming new words by derivation from Teutonic roots was to a certain extent checked by the introduction of so large a number of foreign words.

Instead of making a new word by the old and formerly familiar method of attaching a suffix to a living native root, it became far easier to adopt a term ready made.

[1] German and Icelandic have lost much less than other Teutonic languages.

C

Cp. O.E. thanc (thought); thanc-ol (thoughtful); thancful, thancwurth (grateful); thancolmod (prudent); thancwurthlice (gratefully), &c.

32. Some Norman-French suffixes replaced English ones.

In the fourteenth century we find the modern -ess taking the place of -en, and -ster. Cp. dwelleresse in Wicliffe for dwellstere, goddesse (Chaucer) for Old English gydin; and the modern forms bond-age, till-age, hindr-ance, knave-ry, wondr-ous,[1] &c.

33. Some substitutes for inflexion came into use. The preposition of replaced the genitive -s; the comparison of Adjectives was expressed sometimes by more and most instead of -er and -est. Many Romance adjectives were inflected in the plural after the Norman-French method, as wateres principales, capitalles letres; we also find children innocens (La Tour Laundry, p. 104).

The Old English method of forming a plural adjective was by adding -an (-en), -e.

When used substantively, the Romance adjective formed its plural by the addition of -s, and the Old English by -e. Cp. "He us tekth to knawe the great-e thinges vram the littl-e, the *precio*use-s vram the vile-s."[2] To this method we owe the early forms gentles, familiars, which became the models for many others, as "our delicates and wantons" (Holland's "Pliny," p. 603); the yellowes = the jaundice

[2] He teaches us to know the great things from the little ones, the precious things from the vile ones.

(Hollinshed), "yonges" = young ones (L. Andrewe), calms, shallows, worthies, &c.

The use of Auxiliary Verbs (have, shall, will) became very common after the Norman Conquest.

34. The earliest and the greatest change was upon the pronunciation.

All the older vowel endings -a, -o, -u, became -and the terminations -an, -as, -ath, -on, -od, became -en, -es, -eth, -en, -ed

After a time (fourteenth century) the final e fell off altogether, or was retained as an orthographical expedient. Cp. O E nama, name, steorra, M.E. sterre, star ; O E suna, M.E. sone = son, &c.

35. This change of final vowels, simple as it was, served to weaken most of the inflexional forms.

It also helped to break down the old distinction of grammatical gender.

Thus the suffix -a was a sign of the masculine, and -e of the feminine gender ; but when webb-a (m), webb-e (f), a weaver, came to be represented by the same form, webbe, then the final -e, if retained as a sign of gender, must be limited either to the masculine or feminine. An attempt was made to restrict it to the masculine, as hunt-e, a hunter, spus-e, a bridegroom ; but webbe, a female weaver, occurs in "Piers Plowman" We now use webster.

We also find it frequently used up to the middle of the fourteenth century, to denote the agent. (Cp. the restricted sense of the old fem. -ster, see p. 63). We can easily understand how widuwa (a widow-er) dropped out of use, leaving widuwe (a widow), from which a new masculine had to be formed; just as in the sixteenth century we find spouse (m), and spousesse (f) for the twelfth century spus (m), and spuse (f).

36. After a time a few fresh vowel sounds found their way into the language, as u, in duly; oi in boil;
the a in fame; ei in aisle.

37. Guttural sounds were softened down or became mute.

(1) Initial and final c (k) became ch, tch, as O E.
cild = child; godlic = godlich (godly); streccan = streche (stretch); sc became sh; sceal = shall; fisc =fish; g became i (y), w, geleáfa = ileafe (be-lief); hand-ge-weorc = handy-work; fugol = fowl; dæg = day; lagu = law.

In some instances cg has become j (ge, dge) cring-an = to cringe; brycg (M E. brigge) = bridge.

(2) c, ch, h, g, have disappeared or become mute, ic = ich = ih = I , cniht (M.E. knicht) = knight; heah = high; dirtig = dirty; &c. Cp. the falling away of h in hláf = loaf; hring = ring; hnecca = neck; k, and g, before n, have become mute : cneow= knee; gnagan = to gnaw. Cp. the weakening of l before f and k in calf, walk, &c.

J (jet), z, sh (sure), zh (azure), were sounds that came into use after the Norman Conquest.

38. A new accentuation was introduced by the Normans. The old English accent like that of other Teutonic nations was upon the root syllable as unfastli'-ful-ly, un-be-liev'-ing, but in French there was a slight stress of the voice upon the final syllable.

When French words were first adopted they retained their original accent, thus reward and voyage became reasón and voyáge before they were accented as réason and vóyage.

In the written poetical language of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, we find words of pure English origin ending in -ing, -liche, -ness, receiving an accent on the final syllable. Chaucer rhymes gladnésse with distrésse. But an attempt was made even as early as Chaucer's time to make borrowed words conform to the native accentuation, and in the "Canterbury Tales" we find mórtal, témpest, &c. as well as mortál, tempést, &c.

4. LATIN OF THE FOURTH PERIOD: introduced by the Revival of Learning

39. The large number of French words brought into the language by the Norman invasion, prepared the way for the introduction of fresh Latin words, through the impetus given to learning and literature by the revival of learning in England at the beginning of the sixteenth century.

There are then two distinct classes of Latin words in English.[*] (1) Those that have come indirectly from Latin through French. (2) Those that have come directly from the Latin.

Words of the first class have undergone much change in spelling, and their origin is often obscured; those of the second class have suffered but little alteration, and their origin is easily recognised.

Latin.	Words coming from Latin through Norman-French	Words coming directly from the Latin captivum	caitiff	captive
dilatare	delay	dilate
factum	feat	fact fragilem	frail	fragile
hospitile	hotel	hospital
lectionem	lesson	lection pungentem	poignant	pungent
regalem	royal	regal
securum	sure	secure separare	sever	separate

40 Under the influence of learning, many words coming indirectly from the Latin have taken a more classical form, as, assaute, dette, defaut, aventure, vitaille, have been altered to assault, debt, default, adventure, victual, &c.

41. The influx of Latin and Greek words, by means of learning and education, lasted from the time of Henry VII. to the end of the reign of Charles II. Many Latin words when first introduced into our language altered their termination, as, splendidious, mulierosity, but others were adopted in their original form, as, chylus = chyle, classis = class, precipitum = precipice ; mummia = mummy ; so too with Greek words, parallelon = parallel ; ecstasis = ecstasy ; epocha = epoch

As the origin of these loans was well known, we can understand why compact, convict, &c came into use before compacted and convicted as passive participles.

42. A great number of classical words found their way into the written language which never passed into general usage, as, intenervate, to soften; deturpated, deformed (Jeremy Taylor); ludibundness, sanguinolency (Henry More), &c.

During the reigns of Elizabeth, James, and Charles
I. fine writing and speaking were greatly affected, but fortunately many true lovers of their noble mother-tongue raised a cry against the pedantic use of scholastic or ink-horn terms as they were then called, and thereby did something to stop the tendency to inundate the language with long and useless words.

Thomas Wilson writing in 1553 says, "Among other lessons this should first be learned, that we never affect any strange ink-horn terms, but to speak as is commonly received, neither seeking to be over fine, nor yet living over careless, using our speech as most men do, and ordering our wits as the fewest have done. Some seek so far for outlandish English, that they forget altogether their mother's language, and I dare swear this, if some of their mothers were alive they were not able to tell what they say, and yet these fine English clerks will say they speak in their mother tongue, if a man should charge them with counterfeiting the king's English." Gill in his Lago-nomia Anglica, published in 1619, thus notices what he calls the "new mange in our speaking and writing."
" O harsh lips, I now hear all around me such words as common, vices, envy, malice; even virtue, study, justice, pity, mercy, compassion, profit, commodity, colour, grace, favour, acceptance. But whither, I pray, in all the world have you banished those words which our forefathers used for these new-fangled ones ? Are our words to be exiled like our citizens? Is the new barbaric invasion to extirpate the English tongue? O ye Englishmen, on you, I say, I call, in whose veins that blood flows, retain, what yet remains of our native speech, and, whatever vestiges of our forefathers are yet to be seen, on these plant your footsteps." Butler ("Hudibras," I. 1. 91) speaks of :—

> " A Babylonish dialect, > Which learned pedants much affect ·
> 'Twas English cut on Greek or Latin,
> Like fustian heretofore on satin."

43. There are a few miscellaneous Romance words that have come into the language chiefly during the Tudor and Stuart periods.

(1) Spanish terms.—" During the latter half of the sixteenth century, and the first half of the seventeenth century," the Spanish language "was very widely known in England, indeed far more familiar than it ever since has been.

" The wars in the Low Countries, the probabili-ties at one period of a match with Spain, the fact that Spanish was almost as serviceable at Brussels, at Milan, at Naples, and for a time at Vienna, not to speak of Lima and Mexico, as at Madrid itself, and scarcely less indispensable, the many points of contact, friendly and hostile, of England with Spain for well nigh a century—all this had conduced to an extended knowledge of Spanish in England.   It was popular at Court, Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth were both excellent Spanish scholars. . . . . . The statesman and scholars of the time were rarely ignorant of the language."—TRENCH.

Many Spanish words end in -ado, -ade, -dor, -illo, -oon: as armada, barricade, bravado, desperado, eldorado, grenade, parade, tornado, corridor, matador, battledor, armadillo, flotilla, peccadillo, punctilio (originally puntillo), vanilla, maroon, picaroon, paragon. Other familiar terms are alligator (el-lagarto),[1] buffalo, cannibal, cargo, cigar, cochineal, crusade, don, duenna, filibuster, gala, garotte, indigo, mulatto, negro, parasol, &c.

(2) Portuguese.—Caste, fetishism, palaver, porcelain, moidore, &c.

(3) Italian.—In the time of Chaucer, Italian exercised an important influence upon our literature, but scarcely any upon the language. During the reigns of Henry VIII., Mary, and Elizabeth, Italian was as necessary and familiar to every courtier as French is now-a-days. Numerous Italian works were translated into English and Italian peculiarities of speech were copied by English speakers and writers who wished to be thought in fashion. The writings of Surrey, Wyatt, Spenser, and Milton, show an intimate acquaintance with Italian literature. To Italian we are indebted for the following words: ambuscade, balustrade, bagatelle, balcony, bandit, bravo, broccoli, buffoon, burlesque, bust, cadence, canto, caricature, cartoon, charlatan, citadel, concert, ditto, folio, gazette, grotto, harlequin, lava, madrigal, masquerade, motto, moustache, opera, parapet, pedant, proviso, regatta, rocket, ruffian, serenade, sketch, sovereign, stanza, stiletto, umbrella, volcano, &c.

(4) Modern French.—Some few were introduced during the reign of Charles II., as chagrin, good graces, grimace, repartee. Many others have come into the language at a still later period: accoucheur, début, depôt, déjeuner, élite, goût, programme, soirée, précis, &c.

[1] Lat. lacerta = lizard.

44. A few words are borrowed from other Teutonic tongues :—

(1) Dutch.—Mostly nautical terms, as boom, hoy, sloop, schooner, skipper, yacht, &c

(2) German.—(i) Names of metals, cobalt, nickel, zinc, &c., (ii) loafer, seeverg, plunder, (iii) some few terms are formed after a German model, father-land, folk-lore, fuller's earth, hand-book, one-sided, pipe-clay, stand-point, &c.

45. We have naturalized miscellaneous words from various sources :—

(1) Hindu.—Calico, chintz, muslin, loot, jungle, pundit, rice, durbar, &c.

(2) Persian —Chess, lilac, orange, sash, turban, &c.

(3) Hebrew.—Abbot, amen, cabal, cherub, jubilee, pharisaical, sabbath, shibboleth.

(4) Arabic.—Admiral, alchemy, alcohol, almanac, arsenal, assassin, bazaar, chemistry, cipher, gazelle, giraffe, shrub, syrup, sofa, talisman, tariff, zenith, zero, &c.

(5) Turkish.—Bey, chouse, scimitar, &c.

(6) Malay.—(Run) amuck, bamboo, bantam, orang-utang, sago, &c.

(7) Chinese.—Caddy, nankeen, satin, tea, mandarin, &c

(8) American —Canoe, cocoa, hammock, maize, tobacco, tomahawk, wigwam, yam.

Preponderance of the Native over the Foreign Element.

46 The total number of words in a complete English dictionary would be about 100,000. Numerically the words of Classical origin are about twice as many as pure English terms. The best writers, however, use less than a tenth of the total number; while in ordinary conversation, our vocabulary contains from three to five thousand words.

Recollecting that all our most familiar terms are unborrowed, and that in an ordinary page of English, pure native words are used about five times as often as one foreign term, we can have no difficulty in seeing that the pure English element greatly preponderates over the foreign element

English is a mixed language only in regard to its vocabulary; its grammar is neither borrowed nor mixed. We cannot, therefore, speak of English as a Romance tongue, the construction and meaning of sentences depend upon the use of our grammatical inflexions, and as these are of native origin they serve still more to make the English element the essential and most important part of our language.

47. Pure English elements are :—

(1) Grammatical inflexions.

a. Plural suffixes of nouns (-s,-n) · possessive case (-s) b Suffixes marking comparison of adjectives (-er, -est).

c. Verbal inflexions marking persons (-st, -th, -s) ;
tense (-d, -t) ; endings of participles (-en, -ing).

d. Auxiliary words used in place of inflexions :—

i. Words used for comparing of adjectives (more and most).

ii. Auxiliary verbs (be, am, have, shall, will).

(2) Grammatical words.

a. All numerals : one, two, &c., except second, million, billion.

b. Demonstratives : the, this, that, &c.

c. Pronouns (personal, relative, &c.) : I, thou, he, who, &c.

d. Many adverbs of time and place . here, there, when, &c.

e. Most prepositions and conjunctions.

f. All nouns forming their plural by vowel change.

g. All adjectives of irregular comparison.

h. All verbs forming their past tense by change of vowel.

i. All anomalous verbs.

j. Causative verbs, formed from intransitive verbs by vowel change.

(3) i. Numerous suffixes of—

a. Nouns, -hood, -ship, -dom, -ness, -ing, -th (-t), &c.

b. Adjectives, -ful, -ly, -en, -ish, -some, &c.

c. Verbs, -en, -le, -er.

ii. Numerous prefixes.

a, be, for, ful, over, out, &c.

(4). Most monosyllabic words.

5. The names of most striking objects and agencies in nature as the heavenly bodies, sky, heaven, sun, moon, stars. the elements, fire, earth, water, and their natural changes, thunder, lightning, hail, snow, rain, wind, storm, light, heat, darkness, &c , the seasons, spring, summer, winter, [1] the natural divisions of time, day, night, morning, evening, twilight, sunset, sunrise, &c ; natural features, external scenery, height, hill, dale, dell, sea, stream, flood, spring, well, island, land, wood, tree, &c , words used in earliest childhood, father, mother, sister, brother, son, daughter, child, home, kin, friend, house, roof, hearth, parts of the house and household furniture, room, wall, yard, floor, stair, gate, stool, bed, bench, loom, spoon, cup, kettle &c ; food and clothing, cloth, shirt, coat, shoe, hat, &c ; bread, leaf, milk, cake, ale, wine, beer; agricultural terms, plough, rake, harrow, scythe, barn, flail, sheaf, yoke, &c., the ordinary terms of traffic, trade, business, cheap, dear, sell, buy, baker, miller, smith, tanner, bookseller, &c.. names of trees and plants, ash, beech, birch, oak, apple, corn, wheat, &c.; quadrupeds, deer, sheep, sow, swine, cow, horse, goat, fox, dog, hound, &c ; birds, hawk, raven, rook, crow, swan, owl, dove, lark, nightingale, hen, goose, duck, gander, drake, &c., fish, eel, herring, lobster, otter, whale, &c.; insects, worm, adder, snake, wasp, fly, gnat, &c , parts of the body of man and beast, flesh, skin, bone, head, limb, hand, &c.; horn, snout,

[1] Autumn is Latin.

tail, claw, hoof, &c., modes of bodily actions and posture, &c., sit, stand, lean, walk, run, leap, stagger, wake, sleep, nod, rise, talk, &c.; emotions and passions, &c., love, hope, fear, tear, weep, laugh, smile, &c , common colours, white, red, brown, &c.

48. To the Romance and Latin elements belong many words connected with dignities, offices, &c as, duke, marquis, baron, &c., government, state, people, parliament, treaty, cabinet, minister, army, &c.; law, attorney, barrister, damage, felony, &c ; church, baptism, ceremony, bible, prayer, preach, lesson, creed, evangelist, &c ; general and abstract terms, sense, emotion, passion, colour, &c   Latin and Greek words are most numerous in scientific and philosophical works.

CHAPTER III.

Early English Dialects.

§ 49 From the eleventh to the middle of the fourteenth century there was no standard or classical language. Various forms of English were spoken in different parts of the country, and every work written during this period illustrates some local variety of the English Speech. There were three leading dialects in the fourteenth century, Southern, Midland, and Northern, each distinguished by certain grammatical peculiarities.

Thus in a work written South of the Thames the verb in the plural of the present indicative ends in -eth, as we habbeth, we have : a work composed between the Thames and Humber has -en instead of -eth, as we habben.

A Northern writer in the district between the Humber and the Firth of Forth avoids the use of -eth and -en, and substitutes -es for them, or, as is frequently the case, uses an uninflected form, as we haves, or we have.

Southern.—"We hopeth for to habbe heuen-riche blisce" : "Ye habbeth iherd thet godspel."
(Kentish Sermons, A.D 1240—50.)

Bote the Flemynges that woneth in the west syde of Wales habbeth yleft here straunge speche, and speketh Saxonlych ynow. (Trevisa, A D. 1387.)

Midland.— Thei knelen alle, and with o vois
        The King thei thonken of this chois.
                    (Gower, A D 1393)
  We hauen shep, and we hauen swin   (Havelok the Dane, before 1300) Northern. —Tharfor maysters soom tyme uses the wand that has childer to lere under thair hand.
(Hampole, 1340)
        Thir twa heuens ay obout-rynnes
        Both day and nyght, and neuer blynnes
                    (Ib)

MODERN ENGLISH HAS SPRUNG FROM THE EAST-MIDLAND DIALECT

  50 The Midland dialect between the Thames and the Humber covered a very large area and had various local varieties
  The most important of these was the East-Midland spoken in Lincolnshire, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, which had many words and grammatical forms in common with the Northern dialects
  As early as the beginning of the thirteenth century it had thrown off most of the older inflexions (preserved by the Southern dialects) and was almost as flexionless as our own   It had an extensive literature and numbered among its writers, Ormin, Robert of Brunne, Wicliffe, Gower and Chaucer   Of all these, Chaucer was the author whose works were most popular and widely diffused   Successive writers, as Hoccleve, Lydgate, and Heywood, took him for their model, and thus his influence did not die out till a great change caused by the revival of learning and other important circumstances in the reigns of the Tudors had brought about a new era in the language and literature

It was Chaucer's influence then that caused the East Midland speech to supersede the other dialects and to assume the position of the standard literary English, from which has come in a direct line with but few flexional changes the language spoken and written by educated Englishmen in all parts of the British Empire

50. Periods of the English Language — A language is said to be dead when it is no longer spoken. Such a language cannot be altered but a living language is always undergoing some change or other We do not always take note of it, because it is so very gradual, but when we compare the writers of one period with those of another we have plain evidence of the fact. The farther we go back in this comparison the greater the changes appear, and our language in its earliest period looks very much like a foreign tongue.

In referring to the earlier periods or stages of growth through which our language has passed, we shall distinguish the following divisions —

(1) Old English (A.D. 450—1100).—The language of this period is inflexional Its vocabulary contains few or no foreign elements* Its poetry is alliterative. To this period belong the writings of Cædmon, Alfred, and Ælfric

(2) Early English (A.D. 1100—1250).—The language in this period shows many changes both in orthography and grammar In the first part of this period the modifications were chiefly orthographical, but they affected the endings of words, and thus led the way to the grammatical changes which took place in the latter part of the thirteenth century.

To the earlier part of this period belong the following works: the Brut, written by Layamon, the Ormulum, by Ormin; the Ancren Riwle, &c. To the latter half belong the Story of Genesis and Exodus, the Owl and Nightingale, &c.

(3) Middle English (A.D. 1250—1485).—Most of the older inflexions of nouns and adjectives have now disappeared. The verbal inflexions are much altered, and many strong verbs have been replaced by weak ones. To the first half of this period belong a Metrical Chronicle, and Lives of Saints, attributed to Robert of Gloucester, Langtoft's Metrical Chronicle, translated by Robert of Brunne, and the Handlyng Synne, by the same writer, the Pricke of Conscience, by Hampole; the Ayenbite of Inwyt, by Dan Michel of Northgate, Kent. To the second half belong the works of Wicliffe, William Langley (or Langland), Gower, and Chaucer, &c

(4) Modern English, from A.D. 1485 to the present time. We might subdivide this period into two parts, calling the language in the earlier period from 1485 to 1600 Tudor English.

CHAPTER IV.

Sounds and Letters.

(1) LETTERS.

51 Letters are conventional signs employed to represent sounds   They have grown out of the old pictorial mode of writing, and were at first abbreviated pictures [1]

In the oldest alphabets, a letter does not represent an indivisible sound (consonant or vowel), but a syllable (consonant and vowel).

After a time the consonants were looked upon as the most important part, and consequently they alone were written, or written in full, while the vowel was either omitted or represented by some less conspicuous symbol

Such was the character of the old Phœnician alphabet, from which have come the Hebrew, Syriac, Arabic, Sanskrit, and Greek alphabets.

The Latin alphabet, derived from one of the older forms of the Greek, is the parent of our own symbols.

[1] Cp. the names of the letters in Hebrew and Greek, b = beth (house), Beta . g = gimel (camel), Gamma, d = daleth (door), Delta.

The oldest English alphabet consisted of twenty-four [1] letters, all except three being Roman characters; Þ, (thorn = th), and ꝥ (wên = w), are Runic letters; Ð, ꝥ is merely a crossed d used instead of the thorn j is another form of i, and v of u. w is a doubling of u.

(2) SOUNDS.

52   The spoken alphabet is composed of sounds produced by the articulating organs (or organs of speech), throat, tongue, palate, lips, &c., which serve to modify the breath as it issues from the larynx.

There are two great divisions of Sounds :

Vowels and Consonants.

The Vowels are the open sounds of a language. In a vowel sound the emission of the breath is modified by the organs of speech, but is not interrupted or stopped by the actual contact of any of these organs. In the Indo-European speech there were only three original short vowels a, i, u (far, bit, full), from which have sprung the long vowels a (father), i (machine), u (fool).

The dipthongs are formed in passing from one vowel sound to another : the oldest are e = a + i (fête), o = a + u (note).   All the varieties of vowel sounds,

[1] See Whitney, "Language and the study of Language," p 465 (1867).

(and they may be almost infinite) are modifications of the three original vowels (a, i, u.)

The Consonants are closer sounds than the vowels and less musical. They are produced by the contact of one or other of the organs of speech, whereby the stream of breath is wholly or partially stopped. In the oldest Indo-European speech there were only twelve consonant sounds, b, p, d, t, g, k, s, m, n, l, r; and h in combination with b, d, g, forming the aspirates bh, dh, gh (cp. Gr. φ, θ, χ).

53. Classification of Consonants.—The consonants can be arranged according to the organ by which they are sounded : Guttural (g, k): Dental (d, t, th), Labial (b, p, v, f,) &c. They can also be classified according as the breath is wholly or partially stopped in its exit. Stopped sounds are called mutes or checks, as g, k, d, t, b, p.

In the sounds m, n, ng, the breath passes through the nose, and they are called nasals.

Partially stopped sounds are termed Spirants, as, h, th, f, s, z, &c. ; l and r are called Trills.

54. In comparing b and p &c., d and t &c., we shall find that b and d are pronounced with less effort than p and t; hence b and d, &c. are said to be soft or flat, while p and t, &c. are called hard or sharp consonants.

55. TABLE OF CONSONANT SOUNDS.

	MUTES			SPIRANTS
	Flat	Sharp	Nasal	Flat	Sharp	Trill
Gutturals	G	K	NG		Ch (loch) H
Palatals	J	Ch			Y (yea)
Palatal Sibilants				Zh (azure)	Sh (sure)	R
Dental Sibilants				Z (prize, rise)	S (mouse)	L
Dentals	D	T	N	Dh (bathe)	Th (bath)
Labials	B	P	M	V (witch) W (witch)	F (which) Hw (which)

56. Ch and J (in English) are compounds : ch = t + sh (sure); J = d + zh (azure).

Zh and sh are connected with the palatals, while z and s are allied to the dental, or lingual series of sounds.

57. From this table of consonants we have omitted

(1) c ; because it can be represented by k before a, o, u, and by s (in rice) before e, i, y.

(2) q ; because it is equivalent to kw.

(3) x , because it is a compound of ks, as in fox.

Number of Elementary Sounds in the English spoken Alphabet.

58. In addition to the twenty-four consonants contained in the above table, we have fourteen vowels and five diphthongs, making altogether forty-three sounds.

I.—Consonants.

1.	b	9	m	17	y.
2.	d.	10	n.	18	z
3	f.	11	p	19	ch
4.	g	12	r	20	dh (bathe).
5	h	13	s	21	th (bath)
6	j	14	t	22	zh (azure)
7	k.	15	v	23	sh (sure)
8.	l	16	w	24.	hw (what)

II.—Vowels.

25	a in gnat.	32.	e in meet.
26	a in pair, ware	33.	i in knit
27	a fame	34.	o in not
28	a father	35.	o in note
29	a all	36.	oo in fool, rule
30	a want	37	oo in wood, put
31.	e in met.	38	u in nut.

III.—Diphthongs.

39.	i in high.
40.	i in aye.
41.	oi in boil.
42.	ow in how, bound.
43	ew in mew.

Imperfections of the English Alphabet.

59. A perfect alphabet must be based upon phonetic principles, and (1) every simple sound must be represented by a distinct symbol; (2) no sound must be represented by more than one sign

a. The spoken alphabet contains forty-three sounds, *but the written alphabet has only twenty-six letters or symbols to represent them, therefore in the first point necessary to a perfect system of orthography the English alphabet is found wanting

The alphabet, as we have seen, is redundant, containing three superfluous letters, c, q, x, so that it contains only twenty-three letters wherewith to represent forty-three sounds   Again, the five vowels, a, e, i, o, u, have to represent thirteen sounds (see § 58)   It is thus both imperfect and redundant.

The same combinations of letters, too, have distinct sounds, as ough in bough, borough, cough, chough, hough, hiccough, though, trough, through, &c. sough; ea in beat, bear, heard, &c.

b. In regard to the second point, that no sound should be represented by more than one sign, we again find that the English alphabet fails.   The letter ō (in note) may be represented by oa (boat), oe (toe), eo (yeoman), ou (soul), ow (sow), ew (sew), au (hautboy), eau (beau), owe (owʒe), oo (floor), oh (oh¹). The alphabet is therefore inconsistent as well as imperfect.

Many letters are silent as in psalm, calf, could, gnat, know, &c.

c The English alphabet is supplemented by a number of double letters called digraphs (oa, oo, &c.)

'which are as inconsistently employed as the simple characters themselves.

d. Other expedients for remedying the defects of the alphabet are recognised—

(1) The use of a final e to denote a long vowel, as bite, note, &c.[1] But even with regard to this e the orthography is not consistent; it will not allow a word to end in v, although the preceding vowel is short, hence an e is retained in live, give, &c.

(2) The doubling of consonants to indicate a short vowel, as folly, hotter, &c.[2]

It must be recollected that the letters a, e, i, o, u, were originally devised and intended to represent the vowel sounds heard in father, prey, pique, pole, rule, respectively. In other languages that employ them they still have this value.

During the written period of our language the pronunciation of the vowels has undergone great and extensive changes at different periods, while the spelling has not kept pace with these changes, so that there has arisen a great dislocation of our ortho-graphical system, a divorcement of our written from our spoken alphabet. The introduction of foreign elements into the English language during its written period has brought into use different, and often discordant, systems of orthography (cp. ch in church, chivalry, Christian, &c.). In addition to this there are peculiarities arising out of the orthographical usages of the Old-English dialects.

[1] This came about because the final e was kept in writing after the sound was dropped   The i in bite was long while the word was dissyllabic.

[2] This arose through the short vowel causing the doubling of the consonant.

CHAPTER V.

Permutation or Interchange of Sounds.

60. The sounds of a language are liable to certain changes.

One sound often passes into another.

(1) The vowels are subject to almost infinite variations: thus, short a, as in gnat, has kept its place in land, hand, &c., but has become ai in name, and o in ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ (O F ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ &c   Long a ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ o ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ ⁓ (= bān), &c.. Long i (as in machine), has become ı in bite, drive, &c. Long u (as in pool) has become ou, as in house (= hûs).

(2) The consonants also pass into one another, and the laws governing these changes may be arranged under the following heads.

i. All sounds uttered by the same organ are interchangeable, as b and p, &c., d and t, &c. To ascertain these, read across in the table in sect. 55.

ii. Sounds belonging to the same series though uttered by different organs, are interchangeable. Thus, the spirants f and th; th and s; l and r, &c., often interchange. Read the columns downwards in section 55.

III. Combination of consonants leads to assimilation of the one to the other, as gospel = gos-spel = O E. godspel, ditto = Latin dictum.

61. Sounds belonging to the same organ interchange.—The most common change of sounds belonging to the same organ is the passing of a sharp short, its corresponding flat mute, or vice versâ. Pass from col. 1 to col. 2 in section 55 Sometimes the mutes and the aspirates of the same organ interchange.

Labials.—B has become p in gossip = O.E godsib. P has become b in cobweb = M.E. copweb. F has become v in vixen = fixen from fox, vat = fat. Cp. wife and wives. B and p change to v, as in have = O.E. habban, knave = O.E. cnapa. B and v sometimes pass into their corresponding nasal m, summerset = Fr soubresaut, malmsey = O.Fr. malvoisie, M changes to b in marble, = Lat. marmor.

Dentals.—D becomes t in clot = clod, abbot = O.E. abbod. T passes into d in card = chart, Fr. carte, Lat. charta, pedigree = T E. petigree. D and t become th in father, mother, O.E. fader, moder, author = O.E. autour, Lat. auctor. Th has become d in could = O.E. cuthe; bedlam = Bethlehem; it passes into t in nostril = O.E. nas-thyrlu = M.E. nos-thirles.

Gutturals.—K has become g in wig = periwig = peruque; goblet = Fr gobelet = M.Lat. cupell· ·m.

Palatals.—Ch and j interchange in jaw = chaw, a-jar = a-char.

62. Sounds belonging to the same series interchange :—

ɪ. The Spirants interchange with one another, F = th. Children often say fumb for thumb. Cp. dwarf, M E. dwerth and dwerg = O E. thweorh; Russian Fedor = Theodore. F often represents an older h or gh, as cough, laugh, &c. Th becomes s as loves = loveth. S between two vowels often becomes an r instead of z. Cp. are = ase, were = wese. Cp forlorn = forlosen; frore (Milton) = frozen, varlet = M. Lat. vassaletus.

ɪɪ. Trills.—L and r very frequently pass into one another, as marble = Fr. marbre, Lat. marmor; palfrey = Fr. palefroi = Lat paraveredus, slander = Fr. esclandre = Lat. scandalum, chapter = Fr chapitre = Lat. capitulum.

ɪɪɪ. Gutturals and Palatals.—K has become ch, as chin, child = O.E. cin, cild; ditch and which = O.E. dic and hwilc. G has become j ɪn singe = O.E. besengan, bridge = O.E. brycg, M.E. brigge. Cp. joy = Fr. jouir, Lat. gaudere.

63. Combination of Consonants causes assimilation. When two consonants come together the first is made like the second, or the second like the first. Cp. best = bes-st = bet-st, ad-nose with at-tend, and absorb with absorption. The above examples show us that we cannot keep every combination of sounds. Thus, we may write cupboard, but we must pronounce it cubboard.

The general law for the combination of consonant sounds is, that a flat sound must be followed by a flat sound, and a sharp by a sharp sound.

This has an important bearing in English upon (1) the plural of nouns, (2) the possessive case of nouns, (3) the third person singular of verbs, (4) the past tense and passive participle of verbs.

Flat + Flat.

(1) Slabs = slabz, lads = ladz; wives = wivz.

(2) Dog's = dog'z.

(3) Wags = wagz, stabs = stabz, bathes = bathez.

(4) Dubbed = dubd, hugged = hugd.

Sharp + Sharp.

(1) Slaps, mats, reefs.

(2) Cat's, bank's.

(3) Reaps, fasts.

(4) Weeped has become wept; lacked = lackt

64. Some sounds are more difficult to pronounce than others Difficult sounds, as gutturals, often pass into easier sounds as spirants, or into mere breathings; sometimes they disappear altogether. This explains—

(1) The loss of gutturals at the end of words, as godly = O.E. godlic, I = O.E. Ic, day = O.E. dæg, &c.

(2) The silent letters in through, though, high, &c.

(3) The f sound in laugh, cough, &c.

(4) The y sound in year, O.E. ger.

(5) The ow in tallow, M.E. talgh.

65. The pronunciation of one sound is rendered easier by an additional one. Thus, m often becomes mb or mp, and n changes to nd or nt. Also s becomes st.

(B and p come in after m, because they are Labials, and d, t after n, because they are Dentals.)

(1) Slumber = O.E. slumerian, nimble = O E. nimol, number = Lat. numerus, empty = O.E emtig', tempt = Lat. tentare.

(2) Thunder = O.E thunor, hind = O.E hine, tender = Lat. tener, ancient = O.Fr. ancien, tyrant = Fr tiran.

(3) Amongst = M.E. amonges; whilst = M E. whiles, &c.

66. Occasionally certain combinations of sounds become difficult, and one of the sounds is dropped. Thus, -nf, -nth, and -ns, have become -f, -th, and -s. Cp. soft with Germ. sanft; tooth with Goth. tunthus, Germ. zahn, goose (O.E. gôs) with Germ. gans.

GRIMM'S LAW OF PERMUTATION OF CONSONANTS.

67. We have seen that one sound may pass into another, and also that one sound is often preferred to another, especially by children in learning to speak, who say nuffink for nothing, and poot for foot, &c.

Dialects are often distinguished by their preference for particular sounds. In the south-west of England v and z are used instead of f and s, as vinger (finger), zing (sing). Languages of the same class exhibit a similar partiality; thus, where we have d and th the Germans employ th (= t) and d. Cp. deer = Ger. thier = O.H Ger. tier, thorn = Ger. dorn.

This substitution of one sound for another extends to all the languages of the Indo-European family, and for the most part follows the rules already laid down for the Permutation of Sounds. (1) All sounds pronounced by the same organ are interchangeable; (2) All sounds of the same series are liable to pass into one another. We can read table in sect 55 across or downwards.

The collection of rules by which we can at once tell what sounds in one language correspond to those of its kindred tongues, is called GRIMM'S LAW.

To render the law as simple as possible, we must bear in mind, (1) the three-fold division of sounds into Aspirate, Flat, and Sharp, according to the following arrangement :—

Names.	Aspirate	Flat or Soft	Sharp or Hard
Labial . .	f	b	p
Dental .	th	d	t
Guttural . . .	h	g	k (c)

(2) the classification of the Indo-European languages into three groups.

      I. Classical (Greek, Latin, Sanskrit, &c)

      II. Low-German (English, &c.)

      III. High-German.

(1) Grimm's Law shows us that an Aspirate in I. the Classical Languages is represented by a flat in II. Low-German, and by a sharp in III. High-German.

(2) A Flat mute in I. corresponds to a sharp in II. and an aspirate in III.

(3) A Sharp consonant in I. corresponds to an aspirate in II. and a flat in III.

SUPPRESSION, ADDITION, AND TRANSPOSITION OF CONSONANT SOUNDS.

68   There are other changes of letters that demand a slight notice. Sounds are (1) dropped, (2) added, (3) transposed.

(1) Dropping of Letters.

Sounds fall away from—

I   the beginning of a word (Aphæresis).

II   the end of a word (Apocope).

III   the body of a word, causing coalescence of two sounds (Syncope).

Accent plays an important part in these changes, unaccented syllables are much weaker than accented ones, and are thus more liable to drop off.

I. ABHÆRESIS.

reeve	=	O E ge-refa
sport	=	E.E disport.

(2) Addition of Letters.

Letters may be added to the primitive form
I. at the beginning of a word (Prothesis).
II. at the end of a word (Epithesis).
III. in the body of a word (Epenthesis).

I PROTHESIS.

h, haughty, Lat. altus, Fr. haut.
n (from the indef. article), newt (= an ewt); nouch (= an ouch).
s, scramble, scratch, squeeze.

II EPITHESIS.

d (after an originally final e), wicked, wretched.
d (after the letter n), sound. See § 65, p. 46.

b (after m). See § 65, p. 46.
p (after m). See § 65, p. 46
d (after l), alder (-liefest), M E. aller, i.e. of all.
n (before t), lantern (Lat laterna).
n (before g), messenger, passenger.
r, groom, hoarse, culprit.
Some letters are merely orthographical blunders, having crept in through a false etymology or analogy.
l in could because of should, would.
h in lanthorn from a supposed connection with horn; and in rhyme from a supposed connection with rhythm.

th in farther (because confused with further).

s in island (as if derived from isle).

w in whole and its derivatives

x in pickaxe (as if connected with axe. Cp. M. E. picoys).

(3) Metathesis, or Transposition of Letters.

r third for thrid (cp. three), nostrils (for nosthirls), cp. trouble with dis-turb.

ps becomes sp, clasped (= M.E. clapsed), wasp (= O E wæps).

sc becomes cs or x, hoax (O.E. husc), cp. O.E. ascian, M E axe for ask.

CHAPTER VI.

Etymology.

69. Etymology treats of the classification, structure, and history of words; its chief divisions are inflexion and derivation.

PARTS OF SPEECH.

70. Words are arranged in classes, according to the functions they perform in a sentence; these classes are called the Parts of Speech.[1]

\text{Declinable} \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{1. Noun.} \\ \text{2. Adjective.} \\ \text{3. Pronoun.} \\ \text{4. Verb.}

\end{array}

INFLEXION AND DERIVATION.

71. The changes which words undergo to mark case, gender, number, comparison, tense, person, &c., are called inflexions.

[1] Speech here means language.

The inflexion of nouns, adjectives, and pronouns, is called declension; when applied to verbs, it is called conjugation.

A root or radical is that part of a word which cannot be reduced to a simpler or more original form.

According to their origin, roots are either predicative, as horse, white, write, &c., or demonstrative, as he, the, &c.

When the root is modified by a suffix, it is called a derivative, thus wil-ful, good-ly, tru-th, are derived respectively from will, good, and true.

Derivates may be native or foreign, as know-ledge (English), sci-ence (Latin)   Cognates must be carefully distinguished from derived words   thus father is cognate with the Latin pater but paternal is derived from pater.

Two cognate forms of the same class may exist side by side; from (English), and fro (Scandinavian)

When a derivative or compound consists of elements belonging to different languages, it is called a hybrid, as shepherd-ess (English + Romance), socialism, (Latin + Greek)

A word containing two roots is called a compound, as shep-herd, fore-man, break-fast, &c.

Prefixes like be, fore, with, &c., are compounded with verbs as be-speak, fore-tell, with-stand, &c

Compounds like won't, nill, (will not) áre called agglutinative compounds   This term might be applied to all compounds, in which the elements are intimately fused, as none, naught, fortnight, gospel, &c.

72. Suffixes of inflexion and derivation are called formative elements.

All Suffixes are shortened forms of predicative or demonstrative roots.

The first step towards inflexion is collocation, just as good-like has given us goodly. See Suffixes of Predicative origin.

The suffix -i in Gothic hund-s, Lat cani-s, which marks the nominative case, is nothing more than a shortened form of the old demonstrative pronoun, sa, O E se, the, that.
Thus vox = voc-s, the calling, the voice; rex = reg-s, the ruling one, the king.
The ending -th in the third person sing of verbs, as love-th, is another form of our demonstrative the, tha-t.

73. That which was not originally an inflexion often by usage becomes one. Thus the vowel change in the plural of nouns, and in the past tense of strong verbs was not originally an inflexion.

In feet, teeth, &c., a vowel and a plural suffix (s) have been lost from a very early period. See Plurals of Nouns by Vowel Change.

The vowel change in held, fell, &c is due to an original reduplication. See Strong Verbs.

The addition of a syllable causes a change in the root-vowel Cp nātion, and nātional: fore, and forehead break, and breakfast
The loss of an internal letter cp see the lengthening of ǝ in ʼ... ... . .. ,.. . ... ..,., . (. ,
i .,. ., .   , | . | ., . ,

The suffix -n in ox-en was not originally a sign of the plural, but was added to the root, before the addition of the ordinary plural sign -s. After a time the -s dropped off leaving the inserted letter n to represent the plural inflexion. Cp eaves, alms, riches, &c , which are now treated like plurals in -s.

The primitive plural of ox was not oxan but oxans Chicken was once used as a plural, but the -en is no plural sign. In O.E the plural of chicken = cycen-u from cycen, a chicken : after a time it became chicken-e, or chicken. Cp. M.E lenden for lenden-u or lenden-e, loins.

Such nouns as song, band, &c are usually treated as derivatives of the verbs sing, bind, &c. This is an erroneous view. The O.E. sang, band, show that these words are the roots of which sing and bind are weakened forms.

74. The same word has sometimes come to have two different forms, with different functions, as to and too, of and off through and thorough; one and an, &c.

75. The loss of inflexion is supplied by the use of independent roots. Case-endings are replaced by prepositions; verbal ecdings by auxiliary verbs. Cp. the use of the prepositions of and to for the old genitive and dative inflexions: do, have, shall, &c. in the formation of tenses . more and most instead of -er, -est in the comparison of adjectives.

The preposition to has replaced the infinitive ending -an (-en) as, drinc-an = to drink.

76. There is a tendency in all languages to simplify whatever has become complex or obsolete.

Thus the plural suffix -s has replaced various others, in eyes, hands, sisters, = O.E. eâg-an, hand-a, swustr-u.

Many strong verbs have conformed to the weak or regular conjugation, as helped, O.E. heolp, &c. See remarks on Gender and Number of Nouns, and on Strong Verbs.

77. To supply losses, the functions of other parts of speech have been extended. The loss of the old relative pronouns se, the, &c. left us the neuter indeclinable that, after a time the interrogatives were employed in their stead. See Relative Pronouns.

78. The English language has lost most of the older inflexions, hence its words are no longer formally distinguished (as in Latin, Greek, &c.) as belonging to certain parts of speech without reference to their use in a sentence. The functions of words like homo, amare, &c. are limited, but in English almost any part of speech may be used as any other part of speech.[1]

Thus a verb may become a noun without any change of form.

> "They think nothing they shall from it pass,
> When all that is shall be turned to was "
>   HAWES, Pastime of Pleasure.

"For He [God] is wythoute was, wythoute stel by,"
(For He is without was, and without shall be) Ayenbite, p 104.

Even in Shakespeare the preterite of a verb has been converted into a substantive . a feat not easily performed by any synthetical language, cp.

"No had, my Lord!" King John, IV. 2, 207.

'This formal fool, your man, speaks nought but proverbs ; and speak men, what they can to him, he'll answer with some rhyme-rotten sentence, or old saying such spokes as the ancient of the parish use "
            H PORTER's Two Angry Women of Abingdon.

"Where Galaad made his avowes and hightes (promises)."
                            HARDYNG's Chronicle, p 133

Hight = the preterite of the old verb hatan to call, promise.

[1] See Abbott's "Shakspearian Grammar."

A substantive is easily used as a verb, thus Fuller in speaking of those writers who multiply on the map of the Holy Land streams bearing the name of "River of Egypt," says :—

"Such is the nimiety of my caution herein, who have Egypt rivered this map to purpose."

FULLER, A Pisgah sight of Palestine, p 618, ed. 1869.

        "Do you think I fable with you " BEN JONSON'S Alchemist.
   Rob. 'Las sir, that lamb
        Were most unnatural that should hate the dam.
   Steph. Lamb me no lambs, Sir ROWLEY, A New Wonder.

Adjectives are used as verbs without even the verbal ending -en. Shakespeare uses to fat, to fatten. Cp. thai greteth = grandescunt, become great (Palladius, On Husbondrie).

In Latin, nominal verbs are not uncommon, but they have a verbal form given them by the suffix to which the inflexions are added as arbor-esc-o from arbor, a tree. Fuller renders "Hæc planta in Judæâ aborescit*" by—

        "Hissop doth tree it in Judæa " Pisgah Sight, p. 194.

An adverb may do duty for a verb, as :—

        "They askance their eyes
                                    SHAKSPEARE'S Rape of Lucrece.

Cp "To back the horses," &c.

A preposition and a numeral, originally forming an adverbial phrase, has established itself as a verb and produced a noun. Cp atone and atonement.

> " The constable is called to atone the broil."
> T. HEYWOOD'S English Traveller.

> " To atone two Israelites at variance "
> FULLER, A Pisgah Sight, p. 519.

Any noun may be turned into an adjective; as a gold watch, a church steeple, a silk thread.

By the simple use of the suffix -ed (= possessing), we are able to give a participial, and therefore an adjective appearance to almost any noun   Cp. booted, spurred, one-eyed, &c.

> " As the Jews' coats were collared above, so they were skirted and fringed below, by God's special command "
> FULLER, A Pisgah Sight, p 524

Adjectives are easily converted into nouns.   Cp. simples, worthies, seconds.

> -" When I first took thee, 'twas for good and bad.
> O change thy bad to good "
> T. HEYWOOD, The late Lancashire Witches.

> " Fear not my fall ; the steep is fairest plain."

" O these extremes of misery and joy.

> 'Tis said sometimes they'll [evil spirits] impudently stand
> A flight of beams from the forlorn of day,
> And scorn the crowing of the sprightly cocks ".
>
> J. CROWNE'S Thyestes.

> " And shall the baser over-rule the better ?
> Or are they better since they are the bigger "
> CHAPMAN'S Byron's Tragedy.

> Jove but my equal, Cæsar but my second "
>
> BEN JONSON'S Sad Shepherd.

Even pronominal forms are occasionally employed as nouns :—

> "The cruel she alive."
>> SHAKESPEARE Twelfth Night, Act I Sc 5.
>
> "The shes of Italy"
>> Cymbeline, Act I Sc 4.
>
> "A wretch, a worm, a nothing "
>> FORD's 'Tis Pity, &c.
>
> "Speak of thy fair self, Edith "
>> J FLETCHER's Bloody Brother

"An unthroughfaresome whatkin " (an impenetrable something) —FAIRFAX.

Interjections may be converted into substantives or verbs :—

> "The effect of thine O-yes."
>> DEKKER, Gull's Hornbook.
>
> "All the fohs in fairest ladys' mouths "
>> Ib.
>
> "This sorrowful heigho "
>> NASH, Lenten Stuff.
>
> "Cough and hem."
>
> "Mew at passionate speeches."
>> Ib.

Mum and hem are used as adjectives in the following passage :—

"Now pleased, now froward, now mum, now hem " >> Calisto and Melibœa.

A slight change of pronunciation replaces an inflexion   Cp bathe and bath, glaze and glass, co'nduct and condu'ct.

CHAPTER VII.

Nouns.

I GENDER

79. Gender is a grammatical distinction and applies to words only. Sex is a natural distinction, and applies to living objects.

By personification we can speak of inanimate things as male or female, as "The Sun in his glory, the Moon in her wane"

⟨illegible handwritten/faded lines⟩

80 In the oldest English, the grammatical distinction of words as masculine, feminine and neuter, was marked by difference of endings, and difference of declensions.

Nouns ending in -dom, as freedom (freedom) were masculine, nouns ending in -ung, as gretung (greeting), and in -nes, as godnes (godness), were feminine, and some diminutives in -en, as mægden (maiden), and cycen (chicken), were neuter ; wife and child were originally neuter ; tongue, earth, week, &c. were feminine, and star, sea, tear, &c. were masculine nouns.

Adjectives and many demonstrative and indefinite pronouns, (he, the, this, such, an, some, &c.) were declined in three genders, and agreed with the substantives to which they were joined in gender as well as in number and case

81. After the Norman Conquest, adjectives and adjective pronouns lost most· of their case-suffixes in the three genders, so that the older distinctions could not well be kept up. In the fourteenth century the genders of nouns were exchanged for mere marks of sex, names of males being of the masculine gender, those of females of the feminine gender, and the names of inanimate things of the neuter gender ; so that, strictly speaking, the so-called genders in modern English do not belong to the words at all, but only to the objects they represent. The only genders in English are in the Pronouns.

82. There are now three ways of distinguishing the masculine and feminine.
I. By the use of suffixes.
II. By composition.
III. By using distinct words for the name of the male and female.
Only the first method comes under the head of grammatical gender.

I —GENDER MARKED BY DIFFERENCES OF ENDINGS.

83. A.—Teutonic Suffixes.

These are now no longer in general use.

We have a trace of two old English suffixes to mark the feminine : (1) -en, (2) -ster.

Vix-en (O E. Fyx-en), the feminine of fox (M.E.

vox), is the only one we have preserved out of a tolerably large number once in common use in the oldest English, as

Masc.	Fem.
ælf (elf).	ælf-en (she-elf).
câs-ere (emperor).	câser-en (empress).
munec (monk).	munec-en (nun).
theôw (man-servant).	theôw-en (maid-servant).

In the fourteenth century the feminine in -en is rarely met with.

The change from o to i is regular when compared with the old English god (god), gyd-en (goddess), and wulf (wolf), wylfen (she-wolf)   Cp. Ger. Fuchs, Fuchs-inn.   This change is brought about by the addition of the original vowel in the syllable -en.   Cp. gold and gilden; cock and chicken.[1]

The suffix -ster exists in spin-ster. This is not strictly a feminine noun, because it does not correspond to a masculine spinner, but is merely restricted to an unmarried woman.

It originally meant a female spinner, as in the following passages :—

"Let the three housewifely spinsters of destiny rather curtail the thread of thy life "   The Gull's Hornbook.

"And my wyf at Westmunstre that wollene cloth made, Spak to the spinsters for tô spinne hit softe."
                                       Piers Plowman, A. Pass. v. 130.

In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries we find

[1] This change of the root-vowel (produced by assimilation of two vowels) is called, by German grammarians, umlaut

sempster, songster, huckster, and tapster used as feminine substantives :—

> " Wassel, like a neat sempster, and songster her page > bearing a brown bowl"   BEN JONSON

> " The tapper of Tavystocke and the tapsters potte."
>   JACK JUGGLER, p. 68, Ed. Roxb. Club.

> " The backster of Baldockburye with her bakinge pele (rod)."
>   Ib.

In the oldest English feminine nouns ending in -estre (-ster), corresponded to masculines in -ere (er).

Masc.	Fem.
bæc-ere (baker)	bæc-estre.
hearp-ere (harper).	hearp-estre
hopp-ere (dancer)	hopp-estre
rēd-ere (reader)	rēd-estre
sang-ere (singer)	sang-estre
seám-ere (sewer).	seám-estre
tæpp-ere (barman).	bæpp-estre.
webb-ere (weaver)	webb-estre.

In the fourteenth century the Norman-French suffix
-ess began to replace the English -ster, though the older form lived on for some time side by side with its foreign substitute

In Wicliffe we find sleestere and sleeresse (a woman slayer), dwellstere and dwelleress (female dweller), singster and singeresse (songster). The employment of webster and songster (Wicliffe), huckster (Trevisa), shep-ster, backstere and brewstere (Langland's " Piers Plowman "), beggestere (Chaucer), as masculine substantives shows us that even at this early period (Middle English) the force of the suffix was considerably weakened, and its origin obscured by the frequent use of the new ending -ess.

In the seventeenth century the following hybrids (containing the English -ster and the Norman-French -ess) made their appearance, song-str-ess, seam-str-ess, huck-str-ess, spin-str-ess (Howell), tap-str-ess (T. Heywood)

The suffix -ster now merely marks the agent, as, ~~maltster~~; often with more or less a sense of contempt or depreciation, as, gamester, punster, trickster, youngster.

A large number of words with this suffix, very common in the Elizabethan period, have gone out of common use : drugster, hackster, lewdster, oldster, roadster, &c.

84. In the oldest English -a marks the masculine, and -e the feminine gender.

Masc.	Fem.
ass-a (ass).	a-s-e
mag-a (kinsman).	mag-e
nef-a (nephew)	nef-e.
rǽg-a, rǽha (hart).	rǽg-e.
webb-a (weaver)	webb-e.
wicc-a (sorcerer).	wicc-e.
widuw-a (widower)	widuw-e.
han-a (cock).	hen (= henn-e).
gát, (goat).	gát-e.
wulf (wolf)	wylf (= wylf-e).
hláford (lord).	hláfdig-e.

In the thirteenth century -a was weakened to -e, consequently there was no distinction in form between the masculine and fe . . , l... . b., we be r   , 'r... m ''q r'''   e w..,   (t i u a.e. .u   i(an. , ' te n.a e   '' l't. Plowman.")

F

Witch was of the common gender up to a very late period.

> "Your honour is a witch"
>   SIR WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel, 2.

Wizzard has no connection with witch, but is the O.F. guisc-art, a wise man

Widower is a new formation from the feminine widow, it occurs in "Piers Plowman" (B IX 174)

Neve (= nef-a) gave way in the thirteenth century to nephew (M E neveu, nevu, from O F nevou, Lat nepos), but the old feminine nifte was kept up to a much later period.   ᐧ ᐧ

85 B —Romance Suffixes.

(1) -ess (Fr -esse M Lat -issa).   The Latin -issa makes its appearance before the Norman Conquest in abbudisse, abbess   Before the middle of the fourteenth century, the Norman-French -ess occurs only a few times as the ending of Romance words that had already found their way into the language. Cuntesse (countess) is found as early as 1140, clergesse occurs about 1210, hostesse and emperesse about 1278, charmeresse and maystresse (mistress) in 1340.

In the time of Wicliffe and Chaucer, this suffix established itself in the language as the ending of feminine nouns, being added to English as well as Romance roots.

Wicliffe has -ess for -ster in dawnseresse, frendesse, neighboresse, techeresse, thralesse. He uses -ess in many substantives that had no -ess in Norman-French, as cosynesse, devouresse, prophetesse, servauntesse, spousesse.

In the Elizabethan period the number of words in -ess was far greater than at present, this shows that the suffix is now restricted in its application- ᐧ We no longer retain waggoness, rectress (Chapman), doctress (Stanyhurst), neatress (Warner), fosteress (Ben Jonson), &c

One form is now frequently used in both genders, as singer, dancer, cousin, spouse, &c.

In modern English, -ess is the ordinary suffix of the feminine, and it is added both to native and borrowed words, as goddess, murderess, actress, baroness.

a The suffix -ess is added to the simple masculine as baroness.

b The masculine ending is sometimes dropped before the -ess; as sorceress from sorcerer.

c The masculine ending is shortened before the addition of -ess; as actress from actor.

Duchess is from O F duc-esse, duch-esse
Marchioness is formed from M L marchio
Mistress = O F and O E maistresse from maister = master and mister
Lass is perhaps a contraction of laddess

(2) -ine in hero-ine; and in landgrav-ine and margrav-ine, from the German landgrave and margrave.

(3) -a in donn-a, infanta, sultana, signora.

(4) Lat -trix from Latin nouns in -tor occurs in some nouns taken directly from the Latin, as adjutor, adjutrix, testator, testatrix.

Empress was originally emperice, Fr imperatrice, Lat acc imperatricem
Nurse = M E nurice, norise, Fr. nourrice, Lat acc nu-tricem

II. GENDER DENOTED BY COMPOSITION.

86. In the oldest English we find instances of a general term compounded with an attribute, as man-cild — manch-ild — cærl-fówl — a mæle fowl (bird), a fígen, a lá-et b, a fú ú, with t, a girl, a female friend.

In the fourteenth century we find knave-child, boy-; mayde-child, girl (Trevisa); men-syngers, wymmen-syngers, mæle child female here, che here. here he, he-
,' .l ,

In Modern English, we use

(1) Male and female as male-servant, female-servant; male-cat, female-bee.

(2) Man, woman, or maid, as man servant, woman-servant, or maid-servant. Sometimes man is added to the feminine, and woman to the masculine to mark contempt, as man-milliner, woman-titan.

(3) He and she occur mostly in the names of animals, as he-goat, she-goat.

This last method was not employed in the oldest English, and did not come into use before the fourteenth century, and then only in the names of animals.

In the Elizabethan period he and she were used as nouns.

   " The proudest he."—SHAKESPEARE

   " These shes were nymphs of the chymney " FULLER.

It is used as late as Dryden's time.

   " Another he"—Abs. and Achit.

III DIFFERENT WORDS FOR THE MASCULINE AND FEMININE

87. The use of distinct words for the masculine and feminine, as father, mother, &c. does not belong to grammatical gender.

88. A few correlative terms, apparently distinct, are etymologically connected.

Masc.	Fem
lad.	lass (= lad-ess)
lord.	lady (a final e, denoting the fem has been lost) nephew.	niece (Cp. Lat. nepos, nep-tis).
king.	queen (from the root kin, the primitive meaning of king = father, queen = mother)

89. The rule that the feminine is formed from the masculine is violated in the following words, in which the masculine is formed from the feminine:—

(1) Bridegroom (from bride) = the bride's man ; groom = goom, O.E. guma, E.E gome, a man. There was an E.E. grom = boy.

(2) Widower (from widow). See § 35, p. 19.

(3) Gander (from gans), the original form of goose).

In the O E gandr-a (= *ganr*a* = gans-a), the a is the sign of the masculine ; d is merely a euphonic addition after n, and r represents a more original s.

(4) Drake is a compound from the root end (a duck), with an obsolete suffix -ra*ke*, signifying king.
(Cp. the suffix -rick in bishopr ck)

II.—NUMBER.

90 English, like most modern languages, has two numbers, singular and plural.

Some languages, as French, have only one mode of forming the plural. In English, we have various ways of denoting the plural, one only of which (the addition of s to the singular), is in common use.

In the oldest English there were several plural suffixes, -as, -an, -a, -u (-o): stan-as = stones, steorr-an = stars, hand-a = hands, lim-u = limbs. The most common of these was the suffix -an. After the Norman Conquest these were reduced (in the thirteenth century) to -es, -en; and finally the termination -es or -s became the ordinary sign of the plural

The suffix -as was originally the plural sign of only̅ one declension of masculine nouns, as fisc (fish), smith; pl, fisc-as, smith-as. It is now the only living suffix which is employed when we borrow new nouns and inflect them in the plural All other plural endings are merely the relics of a former period in ˈ, ˈ ˈˈ(, ˈ ˈ ˈ , , , ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈ ˈˈ ˈ , ˈ (ˈ ˈˈ (ˈ , , ˈ ˈ ˈ (ˈ ˈ ˈ
-es (later -us, -ys, -is,) and still remained for the most part a distinct syllable.

> " His sones and his doughtres, bothe I mene " > Occiᴇᴠ ᴇ, De Reg Prin 620.

> " To heere Goˈtus wo. dus thei han forborn "
> O L Miu p 226̅

> " Her bodyus wer lyke dragonys, > Hor tayles wer lyke schorpyonys,
> They had naylys on her knocus,
> That wer lyke ankyr hokys "
> Tundal, 41 ed 1843.
>
> " His life
> That vanisht into smoke and cloudes swift "
> SPENSER, Faerie Queene, I. XI. 54

In the fourteenth century, words of French origin were the first to thrust out the e, and adopt the simple suffix -s (or -z)

This loss of e brings the letter -s into immediate contact with the final letter of the singular, and causes the following phonetic modifications.—

a If the singular noun ends in a flat consonant, a liquid, or a vowel, -s has the sound of z, as tubs, lads, stags, hills, hens, feathers, days, &c

b. If the singular ends in a sharp consonant, -s is pronounced sharp, (as in mouse,) as traps, pits, stacks, &c (For the reason of this see § 63, p. 45)

As far as the spoken language is concerned, it would be more correct to say that the plural is formed by adding s or z to the singular.

The fuller form -es (which is retained -e' in the sing. 1, t ob' to be retained when the singular ex s in a sib in t or j a sound (s, z, x, sh, ch, j), as gas-es, glass-es, wish-es, priz-es, fox-es, church-es, eg-es, judg-es.

Nouns of pure English origin, whose singulars end in -f, -fe, pr...ly r... ... 'ca... 'c) ... l, ... f V ... 1 ... P 1. ... ...'... -es, .. lea', leaves, w...', wives, wolf, wolves.

This change of f to v is not known before the eleventh century In the twelfth and thirteenth centuries we find it taking place in the dative case of nouns, wuf (nom), wuve (dative), and in the plural of adjectives def (sing) deve (pl) deaf It seems that f between two vowels was pronounced as v. Cp. O.E. hæfod, E E hevæd, M E. heed, head, &c.

[several lines illegible/faded]

Remains of older Plural Formations.

91. Plural formed by Vowel Change. The chief changes are—

Sing.	Plural.
a.	e.
oo.	ee.
ou.	i.

S ng	Plural
man, O E man	men, O E. men.
foot, O E fôt	feet, O,E fêt
goose, O E gôs	geese, O E gês.
tooth, O E tôth	teeth, O E têth.
mouse, O E mûs.	mice, O E mŷs.
louse, O E lûs.	lice, O E lŷs.
cow, O E cu.	kn[-ne], O E cŷ.

In these words the primitive suffix s has been lost together with a preceding vowel, which modified the root vowel Thus the old pl of boc (a book) was têk, which stands for a more primitive bocis This change of vowel was not limited to the plural, but took place in the dative of all these words, as, boc (nom) bêk (dative).

Breeches, breeks, had for its oldest plural brêc,
M E brěek, formed by vowel change from brôc Bj rŗ, fyrg, tyrf, were once the plurals of borough (O.E. burh), furrow (O.E. furh), turf (O E. turf).

92. Plurals in -en (O E. -an), as ox, oxen.
Hosen (English Bible), shoon (Shakespeare), are more or less obsolete. Spenser has eyen (eyes), and foen (foes). In a work written about 1420 we find been (bees), een (eyes), fleen (flies), pesen (peas), toon (toes).

In the oldest English, plurals in -en were exceedingly common, in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries they became still more numerous because the older plurals in -a, -u, became first -e, and then -en[1]

In the fourteenth century they became of less frequent occurrence, and in the northern dialects only eyen, oxen, and hosen were in common use.

Children, brethren, and kine did not originally form their plurals in -en (-n).

Children.—The oldest plural was cild-r-u, which became (1) child-r-e (and childer)[2], (11) child-r-en (and childern).

"The childer are pretty childer"
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, Act. 1. Sc 2.

In M E we find calvr-en (calves), eyr-en (eggs), and lambr-en (lambs): the last two are found as late as 1420.
"Late lamber" = late lambs.
PALLADIUS' Husbondrie, p 145, l. 154.

Brethren was (1) brøthr-u, (2) brothr-e, brethr-e (brether), (3) brethren, brethren.

[1] For proof of this, see O E. Hom first series, pp. xxvii.—xxii , second series, p xiv ; Ayenbite of Inwyt, pp. xi-xxv.
[2] The E E. -re became M E. -er. Cp. alre = aller, (of all).

The old brether is found very late. "These be my mother, brether, and sisters" (Bishop Pilkington, died 1575). Brethers occurs in the Romance of Partenay.

The e in brethren comes from the dative brēther
In E E we find dehtren, in M E dexter, originally dohtru, the dative singular was dēhter

Kine (M.E. kin, ken) is a double plural   See § 91, p. 72.

> "Fat and fair ky "
> Cursor Mundi, p 259, 1 4566

Kine has had a collective sense (like pease and T E. hose), ever since the sixteenth century.

> " Kine or oxen "
> FITZHERBERT'S Husbondrie, A D 1598

93 Some words, originally neuter, take no plural sign, as in the oldest English . deer, sheep, swine.
neat.

These words have acquired a collective sense, cp the use of fish, fowl, frust, &c ; gross, fathom, foot, &c.

94. Substantives having two Plural forms, with different meanings.

Brothers (by blood) , brethren (of an order or community)

Cloths (sorts of cloth) , clothes (garments, clothing).

Dies (a stamp for coining) , dice (for gaming).

Pennies (a number of separate coins); pence (collective).

Pennies = O E. penegas, (E.E , M E. pennyes, pans. pens), as singular and takes a plural, as, two sixpences But this is a comparatively modern usage

> " A hundred pieces of vi pence."
> > The Book of Princes, p 164

The forms pence, mice, &c show that the O E. s had only the sharp sound in mouse and not the flat sound in pens

Peas (taken individually, the plural of pea), pease (taken collectively)

Pease O E pisa (pl pesen), is the correct form.

> " Pease are an excellent seede "
> > FITZHERBERT's Husbondrie, p 15

In M E we find the plurals peses and peses The s in pease
i·ḷ-·· . ··ḷ ···-·· '(. | · · ᴉ · | ʃ c.ɪ ʿ·ᴉᴉ ·ᴉ ᴉᴉ ʿ , ᴉ ·ᴉ ᴉᴉ plural peas.

> "A red berry as big as a pease"
> > GERARDE's Herbal, p 53.

> " Benes, peses "—PALLADIUS' Husbondrie, p 149, l. 8

When two forms of a word occur, they must either get different meanings and so be utilised, or else one of them must drop out of use. Cp morrow and morning, latest and last, &c.

95. False Plurals.

The s in alms, riches, eaves, is not a sign of the plural any more than it is in largess, lachess, &c These words are however treated as plural, although singular in form.

Alms is a curtailed form of the O.E almesse, pl almessen (M E. almesse, almes, T.E. almous, pl almessen, almesses). Cp. alms deed ,

> " Angels desire an alms."
>
> > M. '\ ' ·· .ᴉ·, ᴉ·. ·ᴉ· · ·
> >
> > ·· · \   ·   .   .

Riches.—M E richesse, pl richesses, O.F. richesce, Fr. richisse.

"Yet all the ruches in the world that is riseth of the ground by God's sending "

"Yet ?, . f .   . . . of . . . .   .   "
    li·r·l . o . ; . ·r . ur . , a O.u . l . l ., . e   H. · ·, , 8.

Eaves = O.E. yfes, efese, margin, edge; (M.E. eves, ovis; pl. eveses), pl. efesen (cp. T.E. esen-droppers).

> " Ysekeles in eveses "
>   Piers Plowman, B p. 315

96. Plural Forms treated as Singulars.

Some plural forms are frequently treated as sin-gulars; as, amends, bellows, gallows, means, news, odds, pains, shambles, tidings, wages, thanks, small-pox (= small-pock-s, cp. *pock-*mark).

> " A little amends "
>   Spectator , Piers Plowman, B. p 338.
> " A gallows "—Esther, v. 14.
> " The bellows blows."
>   SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, I. 2.
> " A means "—Winter's Tale, IV 3.
> " By this news;" " this news."
>   Measure for Measure, III. 2
> " A fearful odds."—King Henry IV., Part III.
> " That tidings."—Julius Cæsar, IV 3.
> " A shambles "—WHITLOCK, p. 97.
> " A thanks "
>   BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, vol. I. p. 5.
> " The small-pocke "—A BOORDE

The singulars amend, gallow, mean, pain, tiding, wage, thank,
are found in older writers

97. Nouns used only in the Plural.

(1) These are the names of things that consist of more than one part, or form a pair.

a. Parts of the body, and bodily ailments.—Lights, lungs, intestines, &c ; measels, mumps, staggers, yellows (the jaundice).

b. Articles of dress.—Drawers, trowsers, breeches, mittens, &c.

c. Tools, instruments, &c —Scissors, shears, tongs, scales, &c.

(2) The names of things considered in the mass or aggregate.—Ashes, embers, lees, molasses, &c.

98. Some Nouns change their meaning in the mass or Plural ; as, beef, beeves, copper, coppers, spectacle, spectacles, &c.

99 Foreign Plurals.

Foreign words, when naturalized, form their plural in the ordinary English way, as, indexes, memorandums, automatons, focuses, beaus, &c. Others, imperfectly naturalized, still retain their foreign plural

	Sing.	Plural
(1) Latin.	formula	formulæ
	datum	data
	radius	radii
	species	species
(2) Greek.	axis	axes phenomenon	phenomena
(3) Romance.	monsieur	messieurs
	bandit	banditti
(4) Hebrew.	cherub	cherubim
	seraph	seraphim

Some of these have two plurals with different meanings as, indexes and indices , geniuses and genii , cherubs and cherubim.

Automatons and and the ellie effe . . . follow were origi-nally a re ies. We s y ... (le ... . .. .ad used at the f... . tras ... es.

100. Plural of Compounds.

In compounds the plural is formed by s, as, black-birds, paymasters When the adjective (after the French idiom) is the last part of a compound, the sign of the plural is added to the noun, attorneys-general, courts-martial, knights-errant, &c ; cp the prepositional compounds, sons-in-law, lookers-on In a few titles the last usually takes the plural sign, as major-generals, lord-lieutenants A few others have both terms in the plural, knights-templars, lords-justices, lords-appellants

We say master-bakers, but Robert of Brunne has masters mareschals

Compounds in -full were once strictly adjectival (cp. baleful, &c), and took no plural.

> " Three sponsful of vinger "
> A BOORDE
> " A potful bony "
> PALLADIUS' Husbondrie, p 95, l 968
> " Syx hondred syppuol knytes "
> ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, l 3523
> " Thre shypful of knytes "
> Ib. l 2418.

III—CASE

101. The different forms which a noun (or pronoun) takes, to mark its relations to other words in a sentence, are called Cases.

The moveable or variable suffixes that express these relations are called case-endings

Case means a falling The nominative was considered by the old grammarians as the upright form, from which the other forms were fallings off, or declinations (Cp the term declension)

The Romans applied the term case to the nominative (casus rectus), not so the Greeks, from whom the idea was borrowed

The oldest English had six cases: Nominative, Vocative, Accusative, Genitive, Dative, and Instrumental.

In Modern English we have the subject-noun or Nominative case, the object-noun or Objective case, and ᵗʰᵉ Possessive case. The Nominative and Objective case of nouns have the same form, and both are without case-endings. The Objective includes the Accusative or direct object of a transitive verb, and the impersonal object or Dative case, generally expressed by the noun with the preposition to or for before it. It is sometimes called the Indirect object

The true Dative (of nouns and pronouns) is seen in such expressions as, he bought his brother a farm, I made me great works, woe worth the day; woe is ᵗʰᵉ; me-thinks, me-seems, &c. The infinitive of purpose is a dative in " Their feet make haste to shed blood."

We have preserved the O.E genitive -s, but all other endings have gone, e for the dative singular, and um for the plural have disappeared
In the thirteenth century a final e represented both the singular and plural dative The loss of this final e in the fourteenth century, left the dative and accusative undistinguished in form from the nominative

Possessive Case.

102. The Possessive case, unlike the Nominative and Objective, is marked by a distinct form. Our possessive is the representative of the older genitive, but we can see how much its force is weakened when we find as late as 1420 such expressions as strengthes qualites (the quality of strength), cannys knottes (the knots of cane), vynes rootes (roots of vines).

In the oldest English there were various declen-sions, as in Greek and Latin, and different genitive suffixes for the singular and the plural.

The suffixes for the singular in the first period were -es, smith-es (smith's), -an, steorr-an (star's) -e, rod-e (rood's) -s, sun-a (son's)

For the plural they were -a, as, smith-a, rod-a, sun-a, -ena, as, steorr-ena

In the thirteenth century the suffixes of the genitive in the singular were -es and -e; 'in the plural -ene (-en), -e, and the modern form -es which often replaced the others.

In the fr steenth century -es (-s) is the end narr s the er ti h th nd   i   s -en, -enn ;i   a   r l e   1 ¿² ,   er   r ,   1   1b .   r   .
Ge w   e   r   n i   a i   r   i

103. The O E. suffix -es was at first limited to the singular of certain masculine and neuter nouns, but was afterward extended to the feminine.

This ending -es (-us, -ys, -is) made a distinct syllable in the older stages of the language.

> " And by the popes mediaeval."
>   CHAUCER   Man of Lawes Tale, l. 234.
> " And cristendom of prestes handes fonge "
>   Ib l. 377.
> " The nightes char (car) the stars about doth brmg."
>   LORD SURREY
> " Larger than the moones sphere "
>   SHAKESPEARE, Midsum. Night's Dream, 11 1.

Formation of the Possessive Case.

104. The Possessive case (singular and plural) is formed in the written language by the suffix -s. In the spoken language it has the same phonetic modifications as the plural -s. (See § 90, p 71, § 63, p 45).

The apostrophe in the singular marks the elision of the e of the old -es

The general use of the apostrophe in the singular is not found much before the end of the seventeenth century It was probably employed to distinguish the possessive case from the plural number Its use may have been established from a false theory of the origin of the suffix -s, which prevailed from Ben Jonson's to Addison's time, namely, that it was a contraction of his, hence such expressions as —

"For Jesus Christ his sake."—Prayer Book

"The emblem is Camerarius his" = (Camerarius's)

WHITLOCK, p 52

We find this corruption towards the close of the fourteenth century Trevisa has "egles hys nest" = eagle's nest.

-is, another form of -es was sometimes written apart from its noun, and hence perhaps the confusion of his with -is, or -es

In the thirteenth century we find his for -is (-es) intentionally used after proper names.

Nouns forming their plural by vowel change, or by the suffix -n, take the possessive sign after the plural ; as, men's, oxen's, children's.

Nouns forming their plurals in -s were thought to be without the case-sign ; hence in writing the possessive came to be marked by the apostrophe, as boys'.[1]

When a singular noun ends in an s sound, the possessive sign is dropped, and the apostrophe (often

[1] This came about in the seventeenth century, through the notion that the s in boys was the sign of the plural number, and not of the possessive case.

omitted) marks its absence; as, for justice' sake, for conscience' sake, your highness' love, &c.

In foreign proper names (of two or more syllables) ending in s, the possessive is unchanged. Cp. Moses' law, Thetis' wrath, Olympus' top

In common English names we generally sound an additional syllable; as James's (pronounced Jámz-ez).

<blockquote>
"Peerssis bernes," "Peerssis wyf."
Piers Plowman, C. p 176
</blockquote>

105. In compounds the possessive suffix is added to the last term, the son-in-law's house, William-the-Conqueror's reign.

Sometimes we find the principal substantive inflected as in the older stages

<blockquote>
"For his grace's sake the cardinal."—FORD.

"Constance the Kynges sister of France"
= The King of France's sister.—FABYAN.

"Eadwardes kynges leave"
= King Edward's leave

"On Willíames daye the yonger Kynges" = On King William the younger's day.—O E Miscell p. 145.

"Sǽberhtes deáth east seaxna cyninges"
= The death of Sæberht, king of the East Saxons.—Bed. ii. 5.
</blockquote>

The Case absolute.

106. In the oldest period the dative was the absolute case. About the middle of the fourteenth century the nominative began to replace it. Pecock (A.D. 1449) has a few instances of the dative · "Him it writing and not weeping," = he knowing it and not forbidding it (II. 325). Milton occasionally imitates the Latin construction, as "him destroyed." In the use of the passive participle we have introduced being, as, "this being done," which was in the sixteenth century, "this done."

IV.—The words fæder (fader), brother, suster, moder, doȝter, (dohter), in the singular take no genitive inflexion. In the dative we find sometimes a final -e   In the plural we find nominatives in -es, -en, -e; as fadere s, brother e s (brothers), dohtre s, sostre s, brother e n, brethr e n, dohtr e n, deht en, sustr en, modr e n, brothre, dohtre, &c.

In the thirteenth century the genitive plural has sometimes the suffix -ene (-en), but more often -es

The dative plural ends in -en, -e and sometimes in -es.

In the fourteenth century there is but little trace of the dative singular or plural

The nominative plural of nouns ends in -es (-is, -;) -us), without respect to gender, though many plurals in -en are found.

The genitive singular ends in -es (-us, -ys).

Some feminines keep up the old genitive form in -e.

The genitive plural for the most part is like the nominative plural   We have still a trace of the old genitive plural -ene, (-en). See § 102, p. 80.

CHAPTER VIII.

Adjectives.

109ᵛ The English adjective has lost all the older inflexions of number, gender, and case

In Chaucer's time, and a little later, we find (1) a final e used to mark the plural, as, "the smale fowles ;" (2) a final e to denote the definite adjective, "the yonge sonne," "his halfe cours."

Cp. "And quhen sche walkit had a lytill thrawe Under the . . . .
. . . .
. . . . "
JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, The Kingis Quhair.
about 1423.[1]

In the phrase "in the olden time," we have perhaps a trace of the definite declension.

The word ones does duty for an inflexional e in the plural, as M.E, "these tweyne olde" = these two old ones

110. Adjectives used as substantives form their plural regularly, as wantons, calms, shallows. In the fourteenth century only Norman-French adjectives used substantively could be thus inflected, as, viles, preciouses, native words formed their plural by adding the final e, as suete (sweets), soure (sours).

- [1] This is a Scottish imitation of Chaucer.

In the sixteenth century we find this new method extended to English words, as yonges = young ones (L. Andrewe, in Babees Book, p 231) instance of the old genitive plural suffix -er. Alder

The strong declension has for the most part . . . . . . ,
. . . . -e-n, ...
-e (or -en)

Sometimes the definite form takes the inflexions of the indefinite declension.

In the fourteenth century we find a final e used to mark (1) the plural, and (2) the definite form and vocative case of the adjective   (See § 109, p 87)

Comparison of Adjectives.

114 Comparison is that change of form which the adjective undergoes to denote degrees of quantity or quality.   Adverbs that have sprung from adjectives may be compared.

There are three degrees of comparison, the positive or simple form of the adjective, the comparative formed by adding -er to the positive, the superlative by adding -est to the positive.

This rule applies (1) to all words of one syllable,
(2) to some words of two syllables, especially those with the accent on the last syllable.

Orthographical changes :—

(1) When the positive ends in -e, the comparison is formed by [illegible faded text spanning several lines]

cruellest; cheerful, cheerfuller, cheerfullest.

Adjectives of more than two syllables, and most adjectives of two syllables are compared by more and most.

The words more and most are pure English words, but the use of them to express comparison is due to Norman-French influence This mode of comparison came into use towards the end of the thirteenth century, and was frequently employed by the writers of the fourteenth century

But even at this time, adjectives of any number of syllables might be compared by -er and -est. The writers of the Elizabethan period paid very little regard to the length of the adjective.

"The delectablest lusty sight and movingest object me thought it was."—NASH's Lenten Stuff, p 9, ed. 1871.

115. Double comparisons are not uncommon in Middle and Modern English. Some of these double forms arose out of an attempt to strengthen the comparison, as more kinder, most straitest. Others arose through the comparative degree of some irregular forms being mistaken for the positive.

"The lesser lights."—Gen. 1 16.
"More better."—Temp 1. 2.
"The worser of the twain "—WARNER.
"Lesse gifts and lesser gaines I weigh them not."
                    .HALL's Satyres, Book II 2

Some numerals, pronominal words, prepositions, &c., have a comparative suffix, -ther (-ter), as o-ther, whe-ther, af-ter, un-der.

Traces of an old superlative m are to be found in form-er-and for-m-ost. (See § 117, p. 96.)

116. Irregular Comparisons.

I WITH VOWEL CHANGE IN THE COMPARATIVE AND SUPERLATIVE.

Old, elder, eldest (O.E. eald, ald, yldra, eldra, yldest, eldest).

Elder and eldest are archaic, and are replaced by the more recent forms, older and oldest.₄

Cp O E. lang, lengra, lengest, strang, strengra, strengest
This change is caused by the original vowel before the suffix -s and -st

Nigh, nigher, nighest, (next).

Near, nearer, nearest.

O E. neâh, neh, nyra, nearra, neâhst, nêhst.

M.E. negh, nigh, nerre, nere, nerrer, neghest, neyest, next, nest.

The true representatives of the O E. forms are nigh, near, (nigher), next

Near is a comparative form, nearer is a double comparative

" The Knyst asked leeve to ryde by an other way that was nere (= nearer)."—Gest Rom, p 34.

" You're early up, pray God it be the near "
GREEN'S Friar Bacon. See Macbeth II., 4.

Next is a contracted form h + s = k + s = x Cp M f.
hext = highest, coxcomb = cock's comb.

Late, latter, last.

Late, later, latest.

O E. læt (late), lator, latost, lætemest. In the thirteenth century we find late, lattre, latist (latst).

The distinction between latter and later, latest and last, is quite a modern one

" The sea gravel is lattest for to drie,
    And lattest may thou therwith edifie."
                        1420 PALLADIUS, p 14, ll 363-4.

Last arises by assimilation out of lat-st. Cp best = O E. bet-st, gospel = godspel.

(Rathe,) rather, (rathest).

O.E. hræth, hræthra (hrethra), hrathost.

Rathe in Milton means early, as,

> *—The rathe primrose "—Lycidas*
> " The rather born lambs "—SPENSER
> " Late and rathe."—Piers Plowman B p 132
> ' ᛏ. ı ı. ᛁᛁ ɯᵉ   ᛁ. ' —Trevisa iii p 145
> ' ı 'ı ᵃᵉ   ,, ,' '—PALLADIUS, p. 66.

II. FROM OBSOLETE ROOTS.

Good, better, best.

O E. gôd, betera, (betra,) betest, betst.

The positive of better is bat = good, which root is found in O.E. betan, 'to make good,' 'amend ,' and boot, in ' to boot.'

For vowel change in better see elder; for best see last.

Bad
Evil } worse, worst.
Ill

O E. yfel, wyrsa, wyrrest, wyrst.

Wor-se, wor-st, are fórmed from the root weor,
bad

The -se = -re (-er) Cp less, O E læs-se

In the phrase "the weaker had the wer" (Harding), we have the remnant of the Danish værre. Spenser uses wis = worse.

"Was neuer warre o moder born."

Cursor Mundi, p. 68, C.

"Was neuer worre of moder borne."—Ib. F.

Little, less, least.

O.E. lytel, læssa, læsest, læst.

The root of less and least is not the lit of 'little,' but las, 'infirm.' Cp. Goth lasiws, 'weak.' The vowel-change is like that in better.

Much, more, most.

O.E. micel, mâra, mæst.

Much is from mycel, through the forms michel, muchel, mochel.

Mo-re contains the root mah, or magh, to be great Cp. mai-n, O.E. mag-en.

O.E. mucel, M E. muchel, muche, moche = *r*eat, large.

"He sende it was not half much mow."—C*A*t*c*-*RAVE

"A much berd" = a great beard

Sir G and the G *K*n*v* | 1.

Mo (moo), a shortened form of more, is used by Elizabethan writers for mere. Gill makes mo the comparative of many ; more the comparative of much. The Lowland Scotch has a similar distinction.

III. From Adverbial Roots of Time and Place.

Far, farther, farthest.

O E. feor, fyrra, fyrrest, M.E fer, ferre, (ferrer ferrest

Farther. The correct comparative is farrer = M. E ferrer.

"þan mon (must) he gyf light

Als fer als þe some dose and ferrer"

HAMPOLE, P. of C.-p. 246.

Far (M.E ferre) = 'farther,' occurs in Winter's Tale, IV 4.

The th in farther has crept in from false analogy with further, M.E. forther, ferther.

Furth-er (O.E furthor, superlative furthmest), is the comparative of forth.

"He went hym forth and forther soght."—C. Mundi, C. 1. 4107.

"He went forth and further sost "—Ib. T.

"He went forth and ferder soght "—Ib G.

Ere, erst. The root of e-re is the adverb â, ever.

In O E we find se erra = the former, se æftera (the after) = the latter.

In the thirteenth century we find erure, erore = former. O.E. Misc., p. 173.

Af-ter, latter, second (compare after-thought), is from af = of, off.

Fir-st is the superlative of fore. See § 117, p. 96.

For change of vowel see § 83, p 63, § 91, § 72.

Hind-er, from hind, as in behind. Hinderest occurs in Chaucer.

Inn-er, from in. In the thirteenth century we find innerest.

Neth-er, from neath in beneath. Nethereste is used by Chaucer (Astrolabe, p. 4).

Ov-er is from the root ove (O.E. ufe = up), in above. Wickliffe has ôberere (a double comparative).

As late as the seventeenth century over and upper are opposed to nether

"The upper part . shutteth close upon the nether"—HOLLAND's Pliny, p. 241.

"Also as it is in the partes of the grete worlde that they beeth so i-ordeyned and isette, that the over-meste of the nether kynde touche the nether-meste of the over kynde, as oistres and schellefisch . . . in bestenæ kind."—Trevisa II , p. 181

Upp-er, from up. Upperest and overest are found in the fourteenth century.

Utt-er, out-er, from out (O.E. ut).

117. Superlatives in m.

Tne O.E. for-ma (cp. Lat. pri-mu-s) = 'first,' from the root fore, survives in for-m-er (comparative form with superlative sense), and for-m-ost.

"The forme yere."—PALLADIUS, p 71, 1 291
"The formast barn that sco him bare "—C' Mun' ⚓   p 58
"The first child that ever scho bare "—Ib G
"Of alle oure former fadris that evere were or aren "—Babees Book, p 47.

The suffix -most (O.E. m-est), contains the superlative endings -m and -est, as in in-m-ost, ut-m-ost, up-m-ost, hind-m-ost, &c.

Further-more (further-over in Chaucer), is simply a compound like ever-more

For the Indefinite Article see Numerals, One.

For the Definite Article see Demonstrative Pronouns.

NUMERALS.

118. Numerals may be considered under the three following divisions, Cardinal, Ordinal, and Indefinite Numerals.

I.—Cardinals.

One = O.E. an, M.E. an, a, on, oon, o, oo
The Indefinite Article an preserves the original form of the numeral. The n falls off before a con-ȝonant, and becomes a   (Cp. "mine and my.")   A = one in "all of a size," &c.

> "Alle salle that be ane in company,
> And als a saule and a body "
> > HAMPOLE's P. of C, p 228

An in ȝeventeenth century writers is used before words beginning with h
' Yea, I may say of Gardiner, that he had an head, if not an hand, in the death of every eminent Protestant "— > FULLER, Church History, ed 1845, iv p 183

In the phrase "such an one," one must have had its M.E. pronunciation oon

None and No are the negatives of an and a.

Two, twaᵗn 'O F ꝛ, ꝗ in ·--ꞃ) Ʒhreꞓ (O l ꞓꞃ , iꞃʒ ,

The root is thri or thar, 'to go beyond,' 'cross' Cp Lat.
tres and trans.

Four (O.E. feƀwer, feÞer, cp. Lat quatuor) has lost a th.

Five (O.E. fif), has lost a nasal. Cp.·Lat. quinque, Gr. πέντε.

Nine (O.E. nigon, M.E. neȝhen).
A g representing an older v has been lost. Cp. Lat.
novem.

Ten (O.E. týn, tén).
Ten has lost an h or g. Cp. Gothic taihun, Lat.
decem.   The original form·therefore was tehen, or tegen.   Cp. twenty (O.E. twen-tig).

Eleven [O.E. endlif (endleof), ællefne (ændlefene)].
e = en = one ; lev = lif (perhaps) = ten.

Twelve (O.E. twelf).

twe = twa = two; lve = lif = ten.

Sometimes l = t, and f = g, hence lif = tig, (in O.E. twentig = twen-ty)

Some philologists say that hf is from O E lefan, Goth. laiban, to leave; O.E láf, Goth. laiba, a remnant. Hence eleven = one over ten , twelve = two over ten.

The numbers from 13 to 19 are formed by the suffix -teen (O.E. týne) = ten. Those from 20 to 90 are formed by suffixing ty (O.E. tig) = ten.

Hund-red. In O.E. we find hund, and hw:téhntig = 100. Hund signified ten originally.

Hundred and thousand are substantives (originally neuter).

119. Distributives express how many at a time, as, one by one, one and one, by twos, two each, &c.

By twos. In O.E. the dative bt twám would be used.

In the fourteenth century we find be hundredes &c. Chaucer, Astrolabe, pp 11, 19, has by on, by two, &c. By and by = one by one ; on by on is used by Lydgate.

120. In Multiplicatives the cardinal number is placed before the greater numeral, as eight hundred.

They may be expressed (1) by the English suffix -fold, as two-fold. Cp O E. an-fald = simple ; (2) by the Romance suffix -ple (-ble), double (duple), treble (triple).

In M.E. we find -double used as a suffix instead of -fold.

(3) by the word times, as "three times one are three;" (4) by the adverbial form, as, "twice two," "thrice four."

Both O.E. begen (masc.), bá (neut.) Cp. O E. -twégen, two.

In the thirteenth century we find the neuter form (bey, ba, bo, boo) more common than the masculine beyn.

Both contains the root bo (or ba), and the suffix -th.

In O.E. we find ba joined to twa (two), as bâtwâ, butwa, butu. Cp. our "both two."

In the thirteenth century we find a plural bathen, or bothen, and a genitive plural ba-re, and in the fourteenth century bother and bothers are used as genitives.

II. Ordinals.

121. The Ordinals, except first and second, are formed from the cardinal numbers by the suffix -th, as four-th, fif-th, six-th, &c.

In O E. fifth, sixth, and twelfth, were fifta, sixta, and twelfta In O.E. th had, probably, only the flat sound in bathe, and therefore could not follow a sharp mute.

Third = O E thridda, M E thridde

In seventh, ninth, tenth, thirteenth, . . . nineteenth, an n has crept in through Northern forms of Norse origin. Cp tighe = tenth.

In eigh-th (O E eaht-otha), a t has disappeared

First is the superlative of fore, see § 116, p 95.

Second, Fr seconde, Lat. secundus, has replaced the O.E. other.

O E. other = one of two ; that ân = the first ; that other = the second   In M E these became (þ) that oon and that . other, (2) the ton (toon, tone), and the tother.

> " Tua pilers thai mad, o tile the tan,
>   The tother it was o merbul stan "
>   C. Mundi, C p. 96, ll. 1532-3.
> " Two pileres then made, of til that oon,
>   That other was of marbul stoon."
>   Ib T.

III. Indefinite Numerals.

122. All. O.E. eal, eall, Genitive plural al-ra,
E.E. al-re, M.E. aller, alder, alther. See § 111, p 88.

In the Lowland Scotch dialects we find allers, cp bothers, § 120, p. 99.

Many. O.E manig, maneg, is another form of the root magh in more. See § 116, p. 94

In O E we have fela, feola (M E. fele) = many.

Many (O E. mænigeo), a crowd, is a substantive in some expressions, as, "a-great many."

> " O thou fond many "
>   SHAKESPEARE, 2 Hen. IV. i. 3.

Few. O E feáwa, feá, E.E. and M.E. fa, fo, fon, fone, feawe, few, O.E. lyt = few.

CHAPTER IX.

Pronouns.

123. The Pronouns are among the oldest parts of speech, and consequently have undergone much change, so that their original forms are greatly altered. Notwithstanding all this they have preserved more relics of the older inflexions than any other part of speech, as case-endings in hi-m, he-r, ou-r, &c , suffixes marking gender in it, what, &c. They also illustrate the substitution of one demonstrative for another, see remarks on she, they, &c. p. 109. They show how neuter forms may take the place of the masculine and feminine, as in this, &c.; how one case may replace another, as in you for ye ; how the singular may take the place of the plural, as in you for thou ; how relative pronouns are lost and replaced by interrogatives ; how new plurals replace older ones in others, selves ; how impersonal pronouns are formed, as, somebody ; &c.

124. When a pronoun stands alone, as the subject or object of a verb, it is said to be used substantively ; when it modifies a noun it is said to be used adjectively. The Possessive, Demonstrative, Interrogative, Relative, and Indefinite Pronouns have often this double use.

125. The classes of Pronouns are (1) Personal, (2) Demonstrative, (3) Interrogative, (4) Relative, (5) Indefinite.

I PERSONAL PRONOUNS

I Substantive.

126. The Personal Pronouns have no distinction of gender. There are two persons, the person who speaks, called the first person, the person spoken to, the second person

The person or thing spoken of is sometimes called the third person (he, she, it) It is properly a demonstrative pronoun and is inflected like other old demonstratives for gender, as well as for number and case

He = that man, she = that woman, it = that thing.

In E. E. the definite article or demonstrative the is used instead of he before that "mihi Lauerd is the that Juliane on leuethṣ̣̂ = mighty Lord is he that Juliana believes in—(Jul. p. 65) "Ich am the that spec" = I am he that spake—(Ib)

127 THE PRONOUN OF THE FIRST PERSON.

Plural.

Nom.	we	we	we	we
Gen.			ure	ûser, ûre
Dat.	us	us, ous	us	ûs -
Acc.	us	us, ous	us	ûsic, ûs

128. THE PRONOUN OF THE SECOND PERSON.

Singular.

Modern English.	ME		E E		O E.
Nom. thou	thu, thou		thu		thu
Gen.			thin		thin
Dat. thee	the		the		the
Acc. thee	the		the		thee, the

Plural.

Nom. ye, you	ȝe, yhe, ye		ȝe		ge
Gen.			eoure, ewr, ȝure		eower
Dat. you	ȝou, yhou, you, yow		eow, ew, eu		eow
Acc. you	ȝou, yhou, &c.		ew, ow, suw		eowic, eow

There was a dual of the first and second personal pronouns in O.E, which died out before A.D 1300

129. Remarks on the pronouns of the first and second person :—

(1) I. The guttural has fallen off, as in many words originally ending in c or ch. See § 37, p. 64.

Traces of an older form Ich, (which still lives on in the south-west of England), occur in old dramatic writers, as, chill = ich will (Shakespeare, King Lear). In early English we find icham, I am; ichabbe, I have, ßulluch, I will not; nefßich, I had not.

"Icham, a gentylman of much noble kynne, Though Iche be clad in a knaues skynne"
        * HAWES, Pastime of Pleasure.
"Ich am an old man."
        A.D. 1565, AWDELEY, The Fraternity of Vacabondes, p. 8.

(2) Me (dative) is still in use before impersonal verbs, me-thinks, me-seems, &c.; after interjections,

"woe is me," "well is him;" to express the indirect object, to me or for me,

> "Tell me the truth," "he plucked me ope his doublet"—
> SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar, 1 2

In M E we find more frequent traces of the dative, especially with the adjectives leof (lief), loth, &c. and the verb to be.

> "And lever me is be pore and trewe."
> C. Mundi, T I 4375.

Traces of this idiom occur in the dramatic writers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The verb had often replaces the older were (subjunctive).

> "Me had rather "—Rich ii iii 3.
> = M E   Me were lever.

> "You were best take my coxcomb."
> King Lear, I. iv.

> "You had best "—Ib. ii p 208.

> "Him had ben lever to be syke" > FABYAN, p. 270.

> "You were best hang yourself"
> BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, II. p 305.

In the sixteenth century the nominative case replaces the dative as, "thou wert better," &c. for "thee were better," "we had best," = "us were best" Bacon uses "I think good," for "me thinks good"

> "Better I were distract"
> King Lear, IV. 7.

We no longer use mine, thine, ours, &c as genitives, but only as possessive pronouns   In M E we find a trace of the genitive in such expressions as, "maugre myn" (owres &c) = in spite of me, (us, &c) "oure aller" = all of us, &c.

See ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS, § 133.

(3) Thou has been replaced by you, except in the poetical and religious language.

From the fourteenth down to the seventeenth century, we find thou used to express (1) familiarity towards friends, (2) superiority towards inferiors; (3) contempt or anger towards strangers.

"We maintain that thou from superiors to inferiors is proper, as a sign of command, from equals to equals is passable as a note of familiarity, but from inferiors to ... .

(4) Ye, although the true nominative, has been replaced by dative or objective you. In the English Bible, the older use of ye as nominative, and you as dative or objective, is always carefully observed.

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you"
                                                    John xv 16.

In Sackville, Shakspeare, and Milton, we find ye (in an unaccented position) sometimes used instead of you, in the objective case [1]

[1] You does not appear as a nominative, in the written language before the sixteenth century. In the spoken language it was perhaps probably pronounced like ye, or the yea in yearn. Cp. thank ee = thank ye = thank you, look ee = look ye.

131. Observations on the Pronoun of the Third Person :—

(1) In Old English there was only one stem, hi, from which he, she, it, and their cases were formed. The modern declension contains three stems, hi, sa, tha.

(2) He. In Middle English we find ha and a = he. Cp. "quoth a."

> " 'Rah, tah, tah,' would a say ; 'bounce,' would a say ; and > away again would a go ; and again would a come."
> —Hen IV. PART II. III. 2. 303.

(3) Hi-m (dat.) contains a real dative suffix m. Cp. who-m.

(4) Hi-m (acc.) The old accusative was hi-ne, which began to go out of use in the thirteenth century, and by Chaucer's time had wholly disappeared in the Midland dialect.

> "Heo hine bitauhte knyhtes þat duden him muchele schonde,
> - þe knyhtes þet hine ledden bitauhten him þe rode."
> ₌They delivered him to knights that did to him great shame,
> The knights that led him delivered to him the cross.
> O.E. Miscell. p. 49.

(5) She replaces the older heo, which lasted as late as 1387. It is an altered form of the Old English feminine definite article seo, or sio (Icelandic sú).

> "Heo 'nuste hwat heo mende, heo wes of wytte poure "
> ₌She knew not what she meant, she was of wit poor
> O E. Miscell p 85.

(6) He-r (dat.) contains a dative (fem) suffix -r, (-re).

He-r, (acc.), originally dative, has replaced the old accusative hi or heo

> "Heo cuþeþ hi well sone."
> = She will show herself very soon.
> O E. Miscell. p 118.
> "He ber heo on his schuldre."
> = He bore her on his shoulder.
> Ib. p. 49.

(7) It has lost an initial h. The final t was originally a suffix of the neuter gender, as in tha-t, wha-t. Cp. Latin i-d, illu-d, istu-d, quo-d.

It is often employed in O.E. where we use there.

> " It es na tung may tell."
> C. Mundi, p. 84.
>
> " It ben the deueles disoures "
>
> Piers Plowman, B vi. 56.

(8) It (dat) has replaced the true form him.

(9) They is the old nominative plural of the definite article.   It replaced the older form hi or *heo-*in the beginning of the thirteenth century in the dialects of the North and North East of England, under the forms þei, þas, þai.

> " Ic nele neuer þe vorȝake, and so hi seyden alle.
>
> þo hi hedden al þis iherd heo were ful son "
>
> = I will never forsake thee, and so they said all,
>
> When they had heard all this they were full sorry.
> O E. Miscell. p 41

(10) The-m (dat.) is the dative plural of the old definite article and replaces the demonstrative hem.

The-m (acc) was originally a dative and replaced the older forms hi, heo, hem; the true accusative is they, O.E. thâ.

> O E Miscell p 33
>
> " And [he wule] makie heo unfere "
>
> = And he will make them unbold.
> Ib. p 75.
>
> " And right anoon thay token here way to the court of Melibe, and token with hem some of here trewe frendes."—
> CHAUCER, ed Morris, iii. p 193.

In the dramatists, 'em is not a corruption of _them_, but of the older hem

(11) The following table shows the origin of she, they, &c. :—

        = Those three traitors has he slain.
                                Ib. VII. 222.

[1] In O E the was only used as an indeclinable relative. In E.E.,_*the* (masc) and theo (fem.) were used as demonstrative pronouns instead of O.E. se and seo.

"Ane of thas That com for to sla the kyng."
= One of those that came to slay the king
                            BARBOUR, The Bruce, VII. 212.

Tho is another form of tha and then.

                    " þe weore þeos—þat weoren in þe pynen of helle" = They were those never let

    Their tongues cease.". . . .
                        HAWES, P. of Pl p. 136

            II. Reflexive Pronouns.

. 132. The simple personal pronouns me, thee, &c.
may be used reflexively, as, "I repent me," "get thee hence," "sit you down."

The word self is usually added to them.

Singular.—Myself, thyself, yourself, himself, herself, itself.

Plural.—Ourselves, yourselves, themselves.

Self (O.E. silf), was at first declined as an adjective along with the personal pronouns, nom. ic silfa,
gen. mīn silfes; dat. me selfum, acc. me silfne.

Between the nominative of the personal pronoun and the word silf, the dative case of the pronoun was inserted, as: ic me siif = I myself, thu the silf = thou thyself; he him silf = he himself; we us silfe = we ourselves; ye eow silfe = you yourselves;

hi him selfe = they themselves. So we could say God silf and God him self.

These forms are emphatic rather than reflexive.

In the thirteenth century we find the possessive pronoun replacing the dative, as, I mi self, thu thi self, &c. instead of I me self, thu thi self. Cp. himself, themselves, itself, oneself.

Probably self had already come to be considered a noun ; it certainly was often so treated from the fourteenth century downwards :—

> " As thi self likyth "
> > CHAUCER, Astrolabe, pt I. sec 21

> "Myself hath been the whip."
> > CHAUCER, C. T l 5757

> "Thy manner is to muse and [to] deryse,
> So that sometune myself may carry me
> Myself knoweth not where ; and I assure ye
> So hath myself done now."
> > HEYWOOD, The Play of the Wether.

Cp the use of "myself," &c for "I myself," &c.

When self was fully established as a noun, it dropped its old plural e, and took s, as ourselves,
&c.

For some time it was without a plural, as ourself, themself, &c.

One's self, (or more properly oneself), is quite a modern form. In Elizabethan English we find a man's self = one's self.

In O E, ana (the nom. of ân, one,) was used lıke self.
In M.E., we find one used for self with the possessive pronoun, as, "be myne one," by myself (Morte Arthure, ed. Brock, p.
125) = "by me one."

An old meaning of self was same. Cp. "the self truth" (Becon), and "self-same."

> "The same self time"
>   BALE'S Works, Park Soc p 23.

> "For other ruffians as their fancies wrought,
> With self-same hand, self reasons, and self right,
> Would shark on you"
>   SIR T. MORE, ed. Shak. Soc. p 27.

III. Adjective Pronouns.

133. The Adjective Pronouns, sometimes called Possessive Pronouns, were formed from the genitive case of the personal pronouns, and were declined like ordinary adjectives.

In modern English the possessive pronouns, though only used adjectively, are identical in form with the old genitives of the personal pronouns.

Sing.—Mine, my; thine, thy; his, hers, its.

Plural.—Our, ours; your, yours; their, theirs.

Mine, my; thine, thy. The original forms were mine and thine (O.E. mín, thín). The final e is no inflexion, and only marks the length of the preceding vowel.

The -n in mine and thine is an old genitive suffix.

My and thy are formed from mine and thine by the loss of n, as no from none, a from an.

Mine and thine are occasionally used before a noun beginning with a vowel, or h ; but this usage is confined to poetry and the solemn style.

IT is very common in the Bible, and in our old dramatists :—

> "Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice "
> Hamlet, 1. 3

> " Conduct me to mine host."—Macbeth, I 7.

Sometimes mine and thine are used when they follow the substantive, as,

> " Lordyng myne"—Gest Rom p. 32.
> " Master mine "
> Merry Wives of Windsor, 1. 1 163.

HIS is a true genitive of the root hi.

HE-R (O.E. hi-re), contains a genitive suffix fem. -r.

ITS (O E. kis)   This is quite a modern form, not much older than the end of the sixteenth century.   It does not occur in the Bible, it was not used by Spenser, rarely by Shakspeare and Bacon, but is more frequently employed by Milton, and had quite established itself in Dryden's time as the regular form.
The true genitive of it is his.

> "Tat up at   ,   r   n   t   ,   ..f .\> a> > l..'.rt .l !   v   ,   l .'.   u   l   l   ',   ,   .l ..l

> .,.   .   '., .'   .   , .   ,.: when it waxeth
> r   .   r\   ll   ..l\, /   .>'

In the fourteenth century we find hit = its   This form kept up as late as the seventeenth century.

> " Of it own accord."—Lear xxv. 5.

" It knighthood shall do worse .it shall fright all it friends."
> BEN JONSON, The Silent Woman, 11. 3

The own = its own, occurs as early as the fourteenth century, and was in use in the sixteenth century.

"And albeit their trumpery be built up, and reared as high as the sky, yea even in a moment, and as it were of the own self, falleth it down again."—Translation of Jewel, ed. Jelf, p 153.

I

Ou-r, you-r (O.E. ūr-e, eow-er.)
These forms contain a suffix -r, which belongs also to the genitive plural of adjectives. See note on Alderliefest, § 111, p. 88.

Thei-r has this genitival suffix -r, which also appears in O.E. hí-re, heo-re; M.E. he-r. See table,
p 106.

IV. Independent or Absolute Possessives.

134. Mine, thine, his, hers, its, ours, yours, theirs, are used without a following noun

> "Be thine despair and sceptred care;
>   To triumph and to die are mine"
>   GRAY, The Bard

Ours, yours, theirs are double genitives, containing a genitive plural suffix -r + a singular suffix
-s. Hers is also a double genitive

The more ordinary forms in the Southern dialects were hire, her (hers), oure, our (ours), &c Sometimes we find ouren = ours, herem = theirs.

II.—DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

135. The Demonstratives are the, that, this, such, so, same, yon, (yond, yonder.)

The (usually called the Definite Article), was formerly declined like an adjective for number, gender, and case; it is now indeclinable.

In the second period the article is flexionless in Northern writers

The old form tho, the plural of the, is used as late as Warner's-time   They is occasionally found in Tudor English as the plural of the

The, before comparatives, as, "the more   the merrier," is a remnant of the old instrumental case þȳ.   Cp O.E. thî mare = Lat. eo magis.   It must be parsed as an adverb when used in this way.

136. That was originally the neuter of the. In Northern dialects it replaced the demonstrative thilk, and was used before nouns of all genders. Its plurals were (1) tho (or tha) the pl. of the def. art. ; (2) thos (or thas) the old plural of this.

The t in that is the old neuter suffix   Cp. it, what.

Those (O.E. thás), was at first the plural of this. It had established itself, as early as the middle of the fourteenth century, as the plural of that.

137 This was originally neuter. As late as 1387 we find thes (masc.), theos (fem.), this (neuter), Lat. hic, hæc, hoc:

> This is more emphatic than the, and was originally equivalent to the-the   Cp Fr ce-ci, ce-la

These (O E. thæs, thás, E.E thas, theos, thos, thes, these, M.E. thes, thees, thise, these).

The final e in these, marks the length of the preceding vowel, it is not an inflexion

> The form these in M E may have been a new plural formed from this, and therefore commonly spelt thise

This and that sometimes replace the former and the latter (O.E. se ærra and se æftera) see § 116, p. 95

This usually refers to the latter of two things mentioned, that to the former.

> "T⋯ ⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯ ⋯ ⋯⋯⋯
> ⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯
> ⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯⋯."
>   POPE, Essay on Man, Ñ. 2

138. Such (O E. swilc, E.E. swilch, M.E. swi k, swich, swuch, sich, such) is a compound of so (O F. swâ), and like (O.E. lîc). Such like is pleonastic.

We find compounds of such in some such and none such

139. Thilk (O E thylc) = the like. Cp Lat ta-lis

The like is used often as a substitute for the older thilk.

140. Ilk (O E ylc) = that like, same

141. Otherlike and other the like are found in the seven-teenth century

"Chaffe, straw and otherlike mullocke "
HOLLAND, Pliny, 601

142 So (O E swâ) is often used as a substitute, for such.

"I am wiser than so" i e a baby —FORD.

143 Same (M.E same, Gothic sama). In the oldest period same is a conjunction, as swa same swa = the same as; sam—sam = whether—or.

Same is joined to the, this, that, and self (e g self-same. See § 132, p. 112)

144. Yon, yond, yonder (O E geon, Goth. jains, Ger jener) = that, ille.

"Near yonder copse "
GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, 1 136
"Beside yon straggling fence "—Ib. 1 193

Yon is a derivative from the demonstrative root ge (or ja).

In O E geon = ille; geond = illic and trans.

Yonder (adv) is in Gothic jandré

In M E we find yon a like such a, each a, &c ; fiom which probably has arisen yond-er

The Scotch still use yon substantively

"Yonder's a bad man."
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER II p 400
" Yon er theves "—C Mundi, C 1 4850
" 3onder ar theves "—Ib T.
" 3ondir be theves "—Ib T.

" Bote take we him ute of son den,

                    C Mundi, G ll 4185-6
" Take we him out of bonder den
And sel him forth to some chapmen "—Ib F
" Take we him out of that den
And selle we him to those chapmen "—Ib T.

III.—INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

145. The Interrogatives are who, which, what, whether, with their indefinite compounds whoever, whatever, whichever.

146. Who (masc. and fem) is only used of persons. Its neuter is what.

			O E
	Masc. and Fem.	Neut.	Masc. and Fem	Neut

Dat	hwam, whan, was	as masc	whom, wham, wom	as masc.
Acc	hwan, wan, hwam, wham	hwat, whæt, what	whom, wan, won	what, wat, huet

Who-se was originally of all genders. It can be used absolutely, as, "whose is the crime?" The s in whose is a genitive suffix, as in hi-s.

Who-m is a dative like hi-m. It is now also accusative, the older acc. hwone having been replaced by it in the thirteenth century.

147. Wha-t was originally neuter (like tha-t), and never masc. or fem It got its present usage as early as the beginning of the thirteenth century in the Northern dialects.

What for = what sort of.

> "What's he for a man*"
> PEELE, ed Dyce, p 383

148. Whe-ther (O.E. hwæther, M E whether, wher), which of the two.

> "God cupid, or the keeper, I know not whether, > Unto my cost and charges brought you thither."
>
> BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, i. 2.

> "Whether of them twain did the will of his father."
> Matt. xxi. 31.

For the suffix -ther, see Three § 118, p. 97.

We find in the seventeenth century whether-so-ever, in the fourteenth whether-so, whether-ever.

149. Which (O.E. hwilc; E E. whulc, whulch, wuch; M.E. wich, wuch, which, whilk) contains the wh of who, what, and -lc = O.E. lîc = like. Cp. qua-lis.

> "Tele us hwuch is helle"—O E. Hom i. p. 249 > = Tell us what hell is like.
> "Moyses seide, Lord wuch is þi face, let me hit iseo"—Vernon MS

IV.—RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

150. The Relative Pronouns are who, which, what, that, as.

In the oldest period, who, which, and what, were not relative, but interrogative pronouns, whose, and whom, were established as relatives as early as the thirteenth century, but who was much later in getting a relative force, and did not come into common use before the end of the sixteenth century.

151. Who, as a relative, is not recognized by Ben Jonson, who speaks of "one relative which."

In ' Palladius on Husbondrie,' A D. 1420, we find who used as a relative with a neuter antecedent.

Who (= he who, whoever) replaced the E.E. the the, or the that = he that.

" Who steals my purse steals trash."—Othello, III 3 15.

In this sense who = quisquis, is an indefinite pronoun.

In M E. the is sometimes joined to whose and whom.

Who (and its cases) are often followed in M E by that.

152. Which at present relates only to neuter antecedents, but this is comparatively a modern restriction.

"Our Father which art in heaven."

In M E. which is frequently joined to the, that, as —the which, which that, which as, &c.

153. That, originally the neuter singular relative, now agrees with singular and plural antecedents of all genders.

That, during the twelfth century, began to supply the place of the indeclinable relative the, and in the fourteenth century it was the ordinary, though not the only relative. In the sixteenth century, which often supplied its place, and in the seventeenth century, who was frequently employed instead of it. At a later period (Addison's time), that had again come into fashion, and had almost driven who and which out of use.

That (O E. ðætte = ðæt þe), is sometimes used in the sense of that which, or what.

"We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen."
St. John, iii 11

154. What = that which, refers to singular and neuter antecedents   Its true genitive is whose.

"Nebuchadnezzar, the king, made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits" — Dan iii 1. See Milton's Par Lost. Bk. 1 l 2,

What that, that what, what as, are archaic compounds

155 Who-so, what-so, who-so-ever, what-so-ever, which-so-ever, are indefinite, like the Latin quisquis, quicunque.

O.E. swá hwa swá = E E swa-swa, wha-se, M E who-so, O.E. swá hwylc swá = which so, whichsoever.
In the sixteenth century we often find what-som-ever = M.E. what-sum-ever ; sum = as, so is Danish

"To quat contre sum that thou wend "
C Mundi, C. 1 1149.

"To quat contre so thu wend."
Ib G.

156. Who-ever, what-ever, which-ever, are relative and interrogative. They do not occur in the oldest English.

157. As (O.E. eall-swa, E.E. alswa, alse, M.E. ase, alse, als, also), has a relative force after such, same, that.

Such — as = O.E swylc — swylc = such — such. E E. swilc — als.

V —INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

158. The Indefinite Pronouns are who, what, some, one, any, none, no, aught, naught, each, every, either, neither, other, else, enough, sundry, certain, several.

159. Who = anyone, some one, has an indefinite sense in some old expressions:

> "Not as who saith by authority,
> But by the way of intreaty "
>   The 4 P's. in O E. Plays, ed. Hazlitt, I. 373.
> "As who should say "—Macbeth, III. 6.

160. What is indefinite in

> "I'll tell you what now of the devil."
>   MASSINGER, Virgin Martyr, iii. 3

What not, what else (M.E. elles what).

In O E. kwa, â-hwa = anyone, hwat, â-hwat = aught, anything In the thirteenth century we find what treated as a substantive in an hwat = one thing, which gave rise to E.Æ sum-what, other-what , M.E. much-what, little-what, many-what, modern English somewhat.

There may have been some confusion between aught, unght ; and whit See § 164, p 125

> "A strawnge watt" (= wight.)
>   Coventry Mysteries, p 294
> " T ⸱⸱⸱ ⸱ f ⸱⸱⸱ ⸱⸱⸱ ⸱ ⸱⸱ "   ʃ⸱⸱⸱ ⸱⸱ʃ⸱ ⸱⸱⸱ ⸱⸱⸱⸱⸱⸱, r 8.

> " ⸱ ⸱⸱ ⸱ ⸱   ⸱⸱ ⸱ ⸱⸱, ʃ ⸱ ⸱ ⸱ ⸱
>   SPENSER, Shep. Cal. (July)

161. Some (O.E. sum; M.E. som, some, aliquis, quelque), is both singular and plural, but is mostly used before plural nouns.   It has the force of the indefinite a, a certain, some one; some—some = one—another, some—others.

Other-some = some others, is used by Shakespeare in the Comedy of Errors, iii. 2

'Framing unto some unwholesome sores plaisters, and applying other some where no sore is "—HOOKER, I I I

In O E and E,E sum was declined like the strong declension of adjectives, see § 112, p 89

In M E we find pl sume, summe, some
As late as the fourteenth century we find some used in appostion with a pronoun or noun, as sume we = some of us

| · · ·   ·   · ,·· ·   · ·   ·' · ,· , (·\·,··
|·· ·   ,·· · ·· · ·· , ·   ···*   ·

Compounds of some are somebody, something, someone, somewhat.

Somebody seems to have got into the language through the use of body for wight (person)

"A bodye thynketh himselfe well emended in his substaunce and ryches, to whom hath happened some good goubbe of money "—ERASMUS, Apophthegms, englished by Udall, ed. 1542, p. 142a

No body occurs in Piers Plowman —B. xvi. 83, p 292

Something has in a great measure replaced somewhat. This usage is as early as the thirteenth century

Some one arose in the early part of the fourteenth century, and replaced sum man , it is also used where in M E. oon, one = some one was employed.

All and some (M.E al and sum) = all and one, all and singular, is used by Dryden.

"— you must march both all and some"—PEELE, Edw I.

In the sixteenth century it often appears as whole and some, all or some.

Sometimes we meet with a redundancy of indefinites —

And the nature of all creatures is contained in some certain 162 One (O.E. ân, M.E. on, oon) is the numeral one with extended usage. It has a genitive one's, and a plural ones.

In the O E and M E. one was declined according to the strong declension. See § 112, p 89.

It has various usages :—

(1) In "one says" it replaces the O E. man, M E. me (Ger man, Fr. on). This use is as early as the fifteenth century.

(2) It has an indefinite sense like the Latin quidam, Greek τις, especially before proper nouns, as, "one Simon a tanner" (Acts ix 43) This use is found in E.E. See St Juliana, p. 5.

"One in a certain place testifieth "—Heb ii 6
"Also oon told hym that oon of his frendes hadde ispoke euel by hym "—Trevisa, iii 317.
See Piers Plowman, B xx 157, 161, p 374

(3) It is equivalent to some one, see King Lear, i. 3.

(4) It is also used as a noun = person, thing (M.E wight, thing). This usage is found in the fourteenth century.

(5) It is used instead of repeating the noun.

(6) The one = the first. See § 121, p. 99.

(7) One = the same, as, "It's all one, " "one and the same "

For one we sometimes use a man, they, you, people
In M E me = men, is used for one (Fr. on) ; but with a singular verb

  "The vyne also that sayen hath that nature,
  That vynes yf me brenne, or white or blake,
  And kest hem into wyne, me may be sure
  The wyne coloure after the vyne make."
      PALLADIUS, Husbondrie, p 200

The expression as one that = M E as he that, E E. *as

5, 8, 20, 21

163 None, no = O.E. nân = ne ân = not one.

No is formed from none by the dropping of
ne. (Cp my and mine) None is used absolutely, that is, without a following noun : " I have none."

In none other (Acts iv 12 , Deut v. 7), we have the M E use of none for no before a vowel

Oth. . . . .

              THE SITES, O E. Plays, ed Hazlitt, 1. p 428

165. Any (O.E. ǽn-ig; E.E. æni, æi, ai; M.E. eny, ony, any = ullus), has an adjective form like dirt-y, and the stem is an = one. The negative of any is none. In O.E. and E.E. we had a true negative, nænig = nullus.

In O E any was declined like one   A plural in -e was in use in the fourteenth century.

The genitive anies = anyone's occurs in Warner's Albion's England, p 200

Compounds of any are anyone, anybody (M.E any wight, any persone, any man), anything.

166. Each = O.E. æ-lc = â-ge lic, E E. elc, elch, euch, M.E. uch, ych, ech, ilk.

Each is a compound of â, ever, and lic, like. (Cp. which, such, &c). In E.E. and M E each was followed by an, a, on, (= one). This use has survived in each one.

Each other besides being equivalent to each the other, see § 170, signifies every second, each alternate.

167. Every (E E. éever-ælc, M.E. ever-ich, ever-ilk), is a compound of ever and each. It does not exist in the oldest period

Every, as late as the seventeenth century, had a substantive use as in the older periods

Eng. ed. Skeat, p ¶¶, l. 102)

Every-each is like no one, a pleonastic expression, which arose when the origin of every was forgotten.—(See Burton, Anat of Mel. ed. 1845, p. 601).

168. Either (O.E. æghwæther, ægther, â-hwæther, âwther; E.E. æither, aither, either, other, owther, M.E. ether, ayther, other, outher), is an old comparative form (see § 148) containing the prefix â, ever, and the suffix, -ther. It signifies "any one of two." Its negative is neither.

Either has a possessive form either's.

> "Then either's love was either's life"
> > WARNER, Albion's England, p. 57

> "Eytheres will."—Piers Plowman, B xiii 348, p 228

169. Other (O.E. â-ther = one of two, second and other), contains the root ô = one, and the comparative suffix -ther. (See § 121, p. 99).

Other originally followed the strong declension of adjectives. Its plural was othre, when the final e became silent, a new plural others was formed.

Other for some time was used as a plural, both in M E and in the seventeenth century. Cp other some = some others

Another, any other, none other, some other, are forms that arose in the thirteenth century

Other the like = M E otherlike, occurs in Hooker, v 1 3.

170. One another, each other, are sometimes called reciprocal pronouns, but they are not compounds. They love one another; they love each other = they' love—one (loves) another; they love—each (loves) the other.

171. Else (O.E. elles), is the genitive case of an old pronominal root el = ælher (Cp. Lat. alius).

We find its pronominal character kept up in what else, O E. elles hwæt. Warner (Albion's England, p. 178) has elswhat, cp. aught else, nothing else.

Becon constantly uses what other thing for what else. So in Hooker, v. xx. 6

"For what else in the Law but the Gospel foreshewed?"

"What other the Gospel than the Law fulfilled?"

Other where = elsewhere in Hooker, v. xi. 12

Else is used substantively in the sense of something else in the following passage.

"What's that she mumbles? The devil's paternoster? Would it were else"—FORD, Witch of Edmonton, ii. 1.

172 Some demonstratives become indefinites Cp. this and that, such and such ; he knew not which was which ; ult and ult in the Ayenbite, p 54, he and he = one — another.—Piers Plowman, B p 226, CHAUCER's Knight's Tale, ll 1756–1761.

"This would, I have, and that, and then I desire to be such and such "—(Burton, Anat of Mel. ed. 1845, p 185.

"One takes upon him temperance, holiness, another austerity, a thir i . . . .
    . . . .
    . . . .
    . . . . p, 34

"In with the polax preseth he and he ;
    By hynde the maste begynneth he to die."
            CHAUCER, ed Morris, v p 396.

"Then was I dubde as true precise,
    And faithful by and by ,
And some was compted haste enough
    Save he and he and I —DRANT's Horace.

See Palladius, Husbandry, p. 126, l 610, Burton, Anat. of Mel ed 1845, p 8

173 Enough (O E genōh, E E. inoh, inos, M.E. inough, ynough, ynough, inow, enogh)

We sometimes meet with the plural, enow, onow, (M.E. inowe, anow).

174 The words sundry, divers, certain, and several, have acquired more or less the force of indefinite pronouns.

"They had their several (= separate) partitions for heathen nations, their several for the people , their several for men, their several for women, their several for the priests, and for the high priest alone their several."— HOOKER, v xiv 1.

CHAPTER X.

THE VERB.

175 Verbs may be classified, according to their meaning, as Transitive and Intransitive

Transitive verbs express an action which does not terminate in the agent, but passes over to an object, as, "he learns his lesson." Transitive verbs are used reflexively ; as, "he killed himself," "sit down," and reciprocally, as "they helped one another."

Intransitive verbs express an action that is confined to the agent, as, "corn grows." Some intransitive verbs, by the addition of a preposition, become transitive , as, "the man laughs at the boy ," "he talks of himself." Sometimes verbs compounded with prepositions become transitive, cp. come and overcome, speak and bespeak, go and forgo, &c.

176 Some intransitive verbs have a causative form which is always transitive, as,

Intrans	Trans
fall	fell sit	set rise	raise

As we are not now able to form new causative verbs, we are often obliged to give a causative meaning to an intransitive verb, and it then takes an object; as, "he flies his kite," "he ran the knife into his leg" Intransitive verbs may take a noun of kindred meaning as object, as, "he lived a good life," "he died a horrible death."

177. Verbs used with the third person only are called Impersonal verbs, as "me thinks," "it rains," &c   These verbs were much more numerous in the older stages of the language. (See Syntax of Impersonal Verbs).

178 The verb affirms action, or existence of a subject under certain conditions or relations, called voice, mood, tense, number, person. In some languages the verbal root undergoes a change of form to express these various relations.

Voice.

179. Transitive verbs have two voices, the Active and the Passive. When a verb is used in the Active Voice, the subject of the verb represents the actor, or agent, as, "the lion killed the elephant." A verb is said to be in the Passive Voice where the subject denotes the object to which the action is directed, as, "the elephant was killed by the lion."

In English we have no inflexions for the passive voice, as in Latin and Greek, but express the same notion by means of the passive participle and the verb to be. We have a very good substitute for the passive form in the use of an indefinite pronoun for the subject of the verb; as, "somebody killed the boy" = the boy was killed, "one knows not how it happened," = it is not known how it happened; "they say," = it is said. We can also express the passive voice by means of the verb be, and a verbal noun, as, "the book is printing" (= "the book is a printing") = "the book is in printing") = "the book is being printed."

The passive voice has grown out of reflexive verbs. The r in amo-r is supposed to be a corruption of the pronoun se Cp Fr s'appeler, "to be called" Of the Teutonic languages only the Scandinavian dialects have formed a passive voice by means of the suffix st = sk = sik = self, Lat se, we have instances this in busk, "to prepare oneself," "to be ready," and bask

Mood.

180. Mood has reference to the manner or mode in which anything is predicated of the subject.

The Indicative mood makes a direct assertion, or asks some direct question about a fact, as, "John has a book," "Has John a book ?"

The Subjunctive mood expresses some condition or supposition, as "I may go, if the day be fine;" "Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty," "Had I the book, I would give it to you," "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in Him."

As the Subjunctive mood depends upon the construction of sentences, its peculiarities belong to Syntax. The Subjunctive is almost gone out of use; its place is supplied by auxiliary words.

K 2

The Imperative mood expresses a command, entreaty, desire, request, &c; as, "follow me," "grant our request"

In this mood we employ the verbal root without any inflexion. It has only one person, the second (singular and plural) In the oldest southern English the plural took the termination -th

The Infinitive mood is an abstract noun, and has no inflexions for voice, mood, &c ; as, "to see," "to know "   See p 164 for a fuller treatment of the Infinitive Mood

Participles are verbal adjectives, and always refer to some noun in the sentence. Many adjectives take a participial form in -ing, or -ed, or -en. See § 76, p. 59.

> " Thou is the untamed horse
> Dedst use the conuuering bit ,
> And here the u x iuy'rd oar,
> Ry ucli'i han la denly phed,

> Still leapeth through the sea,
> Following in wondrous guise,
> The fair Nereids with their hundred feet."
> PLUMPTRE'S Œdipus at Colonus.

A Verbal Noun in -ing (O.E -ung), often corresponds to a Latin gerund, as "he thanked him for saving his life" Here saving is not a participle, because "for saving" represents an older, "for the saving of"

> " Thonkyng him for the saving of his lif " > Gesta Rom p 7
> " In knowing of the tid of day "
> CHAUCER, Astrolabe, p 19

"Concerning the means of procuring unity, men must beware that in the procuring or munitng of religious unity, they do not dissolve and deface the laws of charity and of human society "—BACON, Essays, 3

Here procuring = the procuring of

earlier periods these nouns in -ing were preceded by various prepositions—an, a, on, in, at, to

> " He sent Ancus his sones an hontynge "
> Trevisa, III 87
> " We han a wyndowe a wirchyng "
> Piers Plowman, B p. 34
> " He fel on sleyynge " > Genesides, 201
> " While it was in doynge "
> Trevisa, III 97.
> " While it was in workyng "
> HARDYNG
> " At a huntyng he sleugh his father."
> Ib

"If she were going to hanging, no gallons should part us "
MASSINGER, Virgin Martyr, II 3.
"Hou hue Absolon to hongynge brouhte " Piers Plowman, C p 64.

These verbal nouns may take an adjective or a demonstrative before them   They may also be used like an ordinary noun as the subject or object of a sentence.

Tense.

181. Verbs undergo a modification to indicate time. These forms are called Tenses. In the oldest period the verb was inflected for the present and perfect tenses only.

There was in O E. no distinct form for the future, its place being supplied by the present. Cp "he goes to town to-morrow." There were, however, traces of a past indefinite tense formed by the verb was, and the imperfect participle.   The perfect and past tenses were expressed by one form.

In the thirteenth century we find the modern future expressed by the auxiliaries shall and will.   In the fourteenth century we find (1) the present imperfect (continuous) formed by the verb be, and the present participle , (2) the perfect expressed by the auxiliary have and the passive participle ; as well as the emphatic form of the present and past tenses, with the auxiliary do.

The growth of new forms render a fuller classification of the tenses necessary. The three simple tenses, Present, Past, and Future, have four varieties, (1) indefinite, (2) imperfect, (3) perfect, (4) perfect continuous.

The fourth variety belongs only to the Active Voice

TABLE OF TENSES

Tense.	Indefinite.	Imperfect and Continuous.	Perfect.	Perfect and Continuous.
Present	I praise	I am praising	I have praised	I have been praising
Past	I praised	I was praising	I had praised	I had been praising
Future	I shall praise	I shall be praising	I shall have praised	I shall have been praising

For I praise and I praised we sometimes use I do praise, I did praise, which are mostly emphatic. (See Do under the heading, Auxiliary Verbs.) In the modern stage of the language verbs undergo change of form only for the present and past tenses.

Number.

182. Verbs are modified to express the number and person of the subject   There are two numbers, Singular and Plural; and three persons in each number, First, Second, and Third. Inflexions for number have all disappeared, except in the verb to be. The person-endings are preserved only in the singular number of the present and past tenses of the Indicative mood.

For the origin of the inflexions that mark person, see Verbal Inflexions, § 200, p. 159.

Conjugation.

183. Verbs are classified, according to their mode of expressing the past tense, into Strong and Weak Verbs.

Strong Verbs form their past tense by change of the root vowel; nothing is added to the root, as, fall, fell, fallen. All passive participles of strong verbs once ended in -en; but this ending has been dropped in very many passive participles of this conjugation.

Weak Verbs form their past tense by adding to the root of the present the letter -d, or -t. The vowel e sometimes serves to unite the suffix -d to the root.

The passive participles of Weak Verbs end in -d, or -t.

Verbs that have vowel change in the past tense, as well as the suffix -d, are not strong verbs. The vowel change in told, bought, taught, has not the same origin as that in strong verbs

The strong conjugation includes the oldest verbs in the language Because this process of vowel change is no longer a regular one, we call these verbs irregular

Very many strong verbs have disappeared from the language · many have gone over altogether to the weak conjugation , some have become weak in the past tense, others in the passive participle

A few have lost their past tense and have taken the passive participle instead, as bit from bitten instead of boot (= he did bite), while others again have lost their old past participle, and have taken instead of it the past tense, as, stood for standen

Strong Verbs.

ORIGIN OF VOWEL CHANGE IN THE PAST TENSE.

184 The oldest mode of forming the perfect tense in the Indo-European languages was by reduplication as, πέ-φευγα, &c , Lat pe-pendi, &c   We have only one verb of this class in modern English, the verb did. Cp. Lat. dedi.

In the oldest stages of the language, reduplicated

(as ... in Gothic haihait ...) is héht ... in ... from hatan, to call. The Gothic haihait, shows the reduplication more plainly than the O.E héht.
On comparing the Gothic verb haihald with the O E. heold, and out held, we see that vowel change has arisen out of an original reduplication; but we are not able to trace all the past tenses of strong verbs to an earlier reduplicated form. Those that can be so traced form a class by themselves, which we shall call the First Division, and the remainder, the Second Division.

First Division.

185. The first division consists of two classes of verbs, (1) those whose passive participles preserve the vowel of the present; (2) those whose past participles have vowel change.

(1) The following verbs once belonged to this class: flow, fold, low, leap, let, row, span, sleep, sweep, walk, well weep.

(2) As early as the fourteenth century we find weak past tenses of the verbs know, blow, grow, leap, walk.

(3) Fold. In the English Bible (Nahum x. 10) we find p. p. folden. Cotgrave has unfolden.

¹ The words in brackets are the ordinary forms now in use.

(4) Held, is an instance of a passive participle being replaced by a past tense This arose through the dropping of en in holden, which left hold as the passive participle, in no wise differing in form in from the present tense. Cp stood for stand = standen

(5) Hew retained its strong past tense as late as the sixteenth century.

"And (he) hew it al to smal peces."—St. Julians, p 85
And the yere folowynge Kyng Wyllyam hewe downe moche of-the wood "—FABYAN, Chronicle, p 250

Hewn and mown are mostly used as adjectives, as, "hewn stones," "mown grass"

(6) Hang The old pretente was heng (See Chaucer, Prol. l. 160) The past hung seems to have arisen from the M E form of the past participle hongen (pronounced like the o in some)

> "Me þouȝte I saw a wyn-tre
> On þis tre, on vche a bowȝe
> Henȝe grapes þicke ynowȝe
> Of þo grapes þat þere hong
> In a coupe me þouȝte I wrong"
> Cursor Mundi, T. l. 4413

Hardyng (Chronicle, p 310) uses hong for hung (p 3) :—

"On Saint Andrewes day this wer drawe and hong "
"With ropes were thou bounde and on the gallowe honge "
FABYAN, Chronicle, p 430.

(7) Sew = sewed.
"An husband that sew god sed apon his land."—Met. Hom. p. 145.

(8) Welk = walked
"A man welk thoru a wod his wai "—Cursor Mundi, Edinburgh MS
"And than we welk forth "—Paston Letters, ed Gairdner, vol. i. p. III.

(9) Leep (lep) = leaped
'For which his hors for feere gan to turne,
And lep asyde, and foundred as he leep."
CHAUCER, Knightes Tale, l. 1828

(10) Flowed   The O E flew became in E E. fleaw, fleau ;
in M E flew is used as the past of fly or flee
" The flood that overflew al the world."—CARGRAVE, p. 17.

(11) Slep = slepped
"Thre daies slep he al on-on "—O E Misc p 24.

(12) Wep = weeped
"Swiche teares wep ure drihten "—O E Hom. II p 145.

[1] All these verbs had a plural form in u —clunҫon, &c = we clung

(1) To this class once belonged bellow, burn, ding, delve, carve, milk, mourn, starve, swallow, stint, spurn, thrash, wink, yield

. Bu. fe , ... ten, shrunken, sunken, are . o . . l, ...

(3) The forms in u (spun, clung) have arisen from the passive participle.

(4) The ou in bound, &c stands for an older o or a. This ou is probably-due to the u in the past participle which in M.E. became ou ; thus the O.E. funden = M.E. founden. Cp O E. cu, hu = M E cou, hou = Eng cow, how

(9) Yald = yielded

"He yalde ayen the sight unto this good man."—LA TOUR
LANDRY, p. 102.

"He yald hym creaunt to Crist."

Piers Plowman, ed Wright, 1 7810, B. xii. 193.

Surrey has the old past participle yolden; Fabyan has yolded.

(10) Foughten = fought (p p.)

"Thus yere was the felde of Dykysmew foughten."—FABYAN,
p 683.

"On the foughten field."

MILTON, Paradise Lost, vi. 410.

(11) Malt = melted.

"And the metalle be the hete of the fire malt "

CAPGRAVE, p. 9.

(12) Dang = dinged

"That thai suld tak kobille stanes,
And dang his teth out all at anes ;
And when thai with the stanes him dang,
He stode as laghand thaim omang "

MS Harl. 4196, fol 170.

(13) Carf = carved.

"And carf byforn his fader at the table "

CHAUCER, Prol 1 100

"Tho was he corven out of his harneys "

The Knightes Tale, l. 1838.

(14) Starf = starved, died.

" — Kyng Capaneus
That starf at Thebes."

Ib 1 935.

(15) Wonk = winked

"He wonk, and gan about hyme to behold "

Lancel of the Lask, l. 1058.

(16) Burst (past) has come in through the old p p. bursten

shook = shaken (Paradise Lost, VI , 219), stood has taken the place of the p p standen, or stonden

(3) Sware for swore occurs in Mark, VI , 23   The a is not original, but probably arose through the M E swor = swer, which caused it to be clashed with spake, bare, &c. Cp 1 1618 in Cursor Mundi, where "he swar his ath" in Cotton MS (Northern dialect) = "he swor an ooth" in Trin. MS (Midland dialect)

(4) Bake.   The old p p baken occurs in Levit h 4
> " myn hungir book this blisful breed "
> POL Rel Love Poems, p 191.
> " —benes and bren ybaken togideres " > Piers Plowman, VI B 184, p 102.

(5) Gnaw was once conjugated like draw, slay   In M E we find gnow and gnew ; gnew was used late in the sixteenth century   The p p be-gnawn occurs in the Taming of the Shrew, III 2.
> " þat best gnow up al bidene "—Cursor Mundi, G 1 6043
> " So depe hit [rasours] wode and gnowe."—St Juliana, p 85.

(6) Heave.   For heaved we sometimes find hove and heft
The O E pret was hôf E E hef, heof, hef, M E hef, hove
> " She hef hir heued heyer "—CHAUCER, l. 5141.
> " Ure Iafdi   this dai was hoven into heuene."—O E. Hom.
> II p 167.

(7) Shape.   The old past tense shope, was in use in the sixteenth century.
> " I shoop me into shroudes " > Piers Plowman, B. Prol 2.
> " But at the last god shope a remedy "
> HICKSCORNER, p 163, ed 1874.

The p p. occurs in mis-shapen, ill-shapen   See Pt h 5

(8) Grave.   We have the old p p. as an adjective in "a graven image."

The verb to grave once signified to bury.

> "In Ebron hir grof Abraham, > Thar first was graven hali Adam "
>   C. Mundi, G 1. 3213.

(9) Lade   We find as passive participle loden, loaden, well as laden.

(10) Wash   The old p p   was retained very late in unwashen

> " Hir body wesusch with water "
>   CHAUCER, Knightes Tale, 1 1425.

(11) Wax to grow   Spenser has wox past, and woxen p p, waxen = grown, occurs in Gen xix 13, Lev xxv 39

> " þai stod þan still and wex no more "
>   Cursor Mundi, 1. 1420.

(1) To this class once belonged grpe, flite (strive), glide, reap, slit, spew, sigh, wreathe.

(2) The o in this class of verbs stands for an older a, which occurs in the archaic forms drave (Josh. xvi 10, Spenser, F Q VI vii 12), strake (Acts, xxvii 17), strave (Surrey)

(3) But (cp the old past tenses rid, slid, writ, smit), is borrowed from the pass participle. The true form is bot, or boot

 "The serpent boot the grehounde grevously " Gest Rom 87

Weak Verbs

194. The strong conjugation comprehends all primitive verbs, to the weak belong all derivative and borrowed verbs.

The weak conjugation is sometimes called the regular conjugation, because the formation of the past tense of weak verbs by means of the suffix d, is the ordinary method now in use The method of forming the past tense by reduplication and by vowel change, is quite obsolete. Children and uneducated persons often make the strong verbs conform to the weak conjugation, and say seed for saw, &c We have done exactly the same with regard to many old verbs, as, showed for shof, brewed for brew, &c.

195 Weak Verbs form their past tense by means of the suffix -d or -t.

In old English we find that this ending had a longer form -de, as, Ic ner-e-de I saved. This -de represents a more primitive dede = did, which is the past tense, (formed by reduplication) of the verb do.

I loved = I love-did; thou lovedest = thou love-didst, &c.

196   The suffix -d is united to the root by the connecting vowel -e, as, lov-e-d, command-e-d.

(1) The connecting vowel, though preserved in writing, is dropped in pronunciation, except when the verbal root ends in a dental. Thus; we loved, praised, thanked, are pronounced lovd, praizd, thankt; but in commanded, and lifted, the -ed has, necessarily, its full pronunciation.

The verbs of this class in O E had the radical vowel short

For the reason of the change of d to t, see § p. 63, 45.

197. The passive participles also end in d or t. This suffix has not the same origin as the d of the past tense.

198   The following verbs have no connecting vowel, and are sometimes called contracted verbs :—

(2) a Before the addition of the suffix -d, the radical vowel is shortened flee	fled	fled

b If the root ends in d, the suffix -d is dropped, and the radical vowel is shortened feed	fed	fed

	fēd -an (feed)	fēd-de	fēd-ed
b	lǣd-an (lead)	lǣd-de	lǣd-ed

Flee was originally strong, see p 140 , fleeh, met, met has conformed to lead, &c Cp O E. mētan, mēt-te, mēt-ed.

In E E we find the shortened p p fed, led, &c The loss of the final e of the past te.ise, in the fifteenth century, reduced the past tense and the p p to the same form thus, ledde became leid, or led.

In some few verbs ending in a liquid, or combination of liquids, t has replaced the older d.

In O E. we find only the long forms of the p p , as, gyrd-ed, send-ed, &c

(6) Some few verbs have vowel-change with the addition of d or t in the past tense.

Archaic.

(a)	tell	told	told sell	sold	sold
(b)	seek	sought	sought
	teach	taught	taught

The change of vowel in these verbs is not the same as that in the strong verbs   It is the present that has changed   The root of tell is tal, which we preserve in tale, and tal-k   Cp sell and sale   Between the root and the infinitive suffix there was once an ı, which turned the a to e ; thus, root tal, whence tali-en, modified to teli-en or tell-en   Cp man, men. The o in told, sold, represents the older a of tale, talk, which was never modified by the lost suffix -ı

The t ın sought, &c , ıs due to the sharp k or c in seek. Under the influence of t, the guttural has become h, or gh

In the seventeenth century we find rought, raught, straught, the past tenses of reck, reach, stretch

In M E we had roughte = recked ; raughte = reached ; straughte = stretched ; laughte = latched, seized.

The verbs of this class were in O E. contracted ın past tense and pass part

199. The following weak verbs have some pecu-liarities that need explanation.

Catch, caught, caught.   This verb of Norman-French origin has followed the past tense &c. of E.E. lacchen, to catch, take , lahte (past).

Analogous to caught we find fraught, as well as freighted ; and distraught for distracted , also raught = reached in Shakespeare, Love's Labour Lost, IV 2, 41 , raught also = reft. Cp 2 Hen VI II 3, 43

"I raught his head from his body " •Pierce Penilesse, p. 82.

Clothe, clad, clad.   In O.E. we find clāthian, (inf) clāthode (past), clāthod (p p), = M.E. clothe (clöthe), clothede (clethede, cledde), cled, clad.

In M.E we find ledde, ladde, = led, which has pro-bably led to clad through cled = cledde = clethede.

Make, made, made. Made lost its radical k as early as the thirteenth century. In the Northern dialects we find in the Northern dialects ma (inf) and mas = makes. Cp M E ta = to take, tas = takes, tan = taken.

Have. had. had: O Γ ɪ·ʰ·ɪ· ɪ·-ʄ·ɪ· ʌ·-ɟ·ɪ·, Γ Γ ʌ·ʻ ɪʻ,ɪɪʻ ʻ ɪʻ ,ʻʻʻ ʌ,ɪ . . ʻ ɪʻ ɪ ʻʻ ɪʻ,

There was also a short form ha, to have, from which comes has = haves. In the M E Northern dialect we find has. See Bruce, XIII 642, (ed. Skeat)

Say, said, said; O E secgan, sægde, sægd.

Lay, laid, laid; O E lecgan, legde, legd.

In say, lay (M E sẹye,, leye), the y represents the older cg (g)

Buy, bought, bought; O E bycgan, bohte, boht In M E buggen, bugge = to buy, and here the y represents an older g which makes its appearance in the past tense Cp slay and slaughter.

Think, thought, thought; O.E thencan, thóhte, thóht.

The n is not radical, cp. gange and go, stand and stood

(Me)thinks, (me)thought, (me)thought; O.E. thyncth, thuhte, thúht

Work, wrought, wrought; O E wyrcan, worhte, worht.

Wrought, as a past tense, is almost superseded by the more modern form, worked.

Went was originally the past tense of wend. O E. wendan, to turn, go It replaced the O.E eo-de, M E sede, sode, yode (past tense of the root I to go)

Go (old form gang) was originally a strong verb, as is seen by its p p gone.

Ago = agone is the p.p. of the O E. verb agan,, to go by, elapse, It is now used adverbially, as "a long time ago."

> " By Saint Mary, and I wist that, I would be ago "
>
> HICKSCORNER, p 167, ed 1874.

> " Who, think you, brought here this figure?
> Certes, Lord Nature, > Himself not long agone "
>
> The Four Elements, p 28, ed 1874.

Do, did, done, is a reduplicated verb, and of course belongs to the strong conjugation of verbs

The Sanskrit dhâ to place is cognate with English do, and its perfect dadhau is formed by reduplication, like English did.

All the strong verbs are of primary origin ; the weak verbs are of secondary formation. To bear is a primary verb, because it is formed directly from the root, bar ; but tell, as we have seen (p. 157), is formed from the nominal theme, tale, and is therefore a derivative verb.

The root is the significant element in the verb, to which are added endings to mark person, tense, or mood.

Sometimes the personal terminations are added directly to the verbal root, as in do-st, do-th, or by means of a connecting vowel, as in lov-e-st,
lov-e-th.

· The person-endings were originally pronominal roots placed after, and compounded with, the verbal root or theme, as if we were to say love-I, love-thou, love-he, &c

201. The suffix of the first person singular, was originally m (for mi), which we still retain in the verb, a-m.

Cp. Lat su-m, Gr εἰ-μι, Sansk as-mi = I am, Ger. bin, O H G pim, O E (Northern) beom, I be 202 The suffix of the second person singular is -st; it was originally -t, which can be traced back to a suffix -ti, identical in origin with the root of thou In the subjunctive mood this suffix is altogether lost.

The original t occurs in shal-t, wil-t, ar-t

... ... OΓ ... t 't . .. e .m . . . 1 .
... ; . .. ... r . ... d r ... .e' l . .d, ...
I . 'st . . 'r . .. .. .e .. er n r e . . . . t, i.. I . .. . r ...
century.

203. The suffix of the third person is -th (the root of the, tha-t) = he, that. As early as the eleventh century, in the Northern dialects, th was softened to s; but the former is now archaic

In the past tense of strong and weak verbs, the endings in the first and third persons singular have altogether disappeared

204 In modern English we have no plural suffixes.

In O.E the indicative present plural of all persons ended in -th (originally the ending of the second person plural), as (1) ber-a-th; (2) ber-a-th; (3) ber-a-th.

The past indicative and the subjunctive (present and past) ended all their persons in -n (the original suffix of the third person plural); as, subjunctive present find-e-n; indicative past, fund-o-n, and subjunctive past, fund-e-n, or fund-o-n.

In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, we find the Southern dialect keeping -th for the present plural indicative, the Midland -n, and the Northern dropping all endings, or taking -s in the second and third persons. (See § 49, p. 31.)

In O E. the personal endings were often dropped when the pronoun followed the verbs, as gá ge = gath ge (go ye) ; ete we = eten we (eat we, let us eat)

The plural in -en was in use up to the middle of the sixteenth century, and a few examples are to be found in Spenser and Shakespeare, Hall, (contemporary with Milton) uses it in his Satires, e g.

" And angry bullets whistlen at his ear "

vi 46

In O.E the imperative plural ended in -th, as nim-ath, take ye. In M.E this ending was kept up in the Midland and Southern dialects, but not in the Northern dialect, where -s was used instead of it Infinitive Mood.

206. The infinitive is simply an abstract noun   In O E the infinitive ending was -an, as drinc-an, to drink.

In the twelfth and following centuries, this -an became -en (-in) or e.

In Wickliffe, the suffix is for the most part -e ; in Chaucer -en or -e. This -e after a time became silent, and the infinitive was only distinguished by the preposition to (except after an auxiliary verb), which at first belonged only to the dative or gerundial infinitive.

" As ha schulde stupin and strecche forth that swire {neck} " Juliana, B p 73, A.D. 1210.
" In ful a bitter bath bathum ich schal naked "
                             O. E Miscell p. 180, A D 1246
" In a bytter bath ich schal bathe naked "
                             Ib. p 181, later version
" To bakbite, and to bosten · and here fals witnesse ' Piers Plowman, B 11 80

The infinitive in O E was inflected for the dative by the suffix -e, and was governed by the preposition to ; as, tô gehyrann-e, tc hear   This is sometimes called the gerundial infinitive, in contradis-tinction to the simple or uninflected infinitive.

It was used chiefly to express purpose , it translated also Lat supines, gerunds, future participles, and ut with the subjunctive ; as, " what went ye out for to see," " he is to blame," &c.

            Latin supine in -um.
    " Sôthlîce ût eode se sædere his sæd tô sâwenne."
    — Verily outwent the sower to sow his seed.
                             Matt xiii. 4.

Latin periphrastic conjugation in -rus and -dus

" We selfe mágon seðthan thá thing the tô seðthenne ʋnd, and brædan thá thing the tô brædenne sind " = We ourselves may seethe the things that are to be sodden, and roast the things that are to be roasted ÆLFRIC

" Hit is sceamu tô tellanne, ac hit ne thûhte him nán sceamu *tô

Latin supine in -u.

" Êðe .. tô findanne " = Easy to find Ps. lxxvi. 16.

Latin genitive of gerund.

Sometimes we find the dative infinitive used to mark the future.
    " Thone calic þe ic tô drincenne hæbbe "
    = The cup that I have to drink Matt xx. 22
    " Ic tô drincenne hæbbe."
    = Lat bibiturus sum.

The gerundial ending not only took the same form as the simple infinitive, but it was often confounded with the present participle in -ende, or -inde (later -inge) in E E and M E
"Theme begunne we to fleonne ant turneth to the lufte, ant this is al that we doth te deruen cristene men ant ʒʒin

    ' Þe synfulle (fasteth) for to clensen him, the rightwise for to amonge the lettres that were lįstere to wrytynge and to spekynge"—Ib. III p 249

That the partıcıple ın -nde could be confounded wıth the ınf.
ın -en ıs seen ın the followıng passage :—

  " But thanke God of heuen for that he hath the seuene
    And so thou schalt, my doustır, a good lįf lyvande."
                                    Babees Book, p 43.

Participles.

207. The present participle is formed by the suffix
-ing, which has replaced M.E. -inde, -ende; O.E.
-end.

The modern form -ing made its appearance ın the Southern dialects ın the latter part of the twelfth century, but the older form ın -ande was retained ın the Northern dialects up to a very late period   (Cp Ben Jonson's Sad Shepherd, ıı 2). Spenser has the archaıc forms glitterand and trenchand for glittering and trenchant.

This change of -ınde to -ing has caused great confusion between verbal nouns ın -ing (O.E. -ung) and participles ın -ıng (see p. 133).

    " Wommen seueth lyf, and fedynde to Kynges."
                                    Trevisa, III. p 183.
   Here fedynde = feeding = sustenance.   See O E. Hom ıı.
p. 177, l 23.

    The Passive participle ın the eldest period was a prefix ge, which, after the Norman Conquest, was reduced to (i, y, e)   Milton has yclept = called.

He wrongly adds it to a present participle in "star y-pointing."

The passive participle of all strong verbs ended in -en. In the thirteenth century we find n falling away; as, ifunde = found, ibunde = bound, very many of our strong verbs have lost their passive participles, and others at one time showed a tendency to do the same. Cp. spoke and eat in Shakspeare, for spoken and eaten.

The passive participle of weak verbs ended in -d; as, lov-e-d. The primitive form was -th, which is still preserved in *un-cou*th, literally *unknown;
couth* (O.E. cuth) being the p p. of can.

The adjectival character of the verbal suffixes -en (-n) and -ed, is seen by comparing them with the endings in gold-en, silken; hot-headed, or e-eyed, &c.

In the thirteenth century sındon (are) gives place to beoth, or beth. In M.E. are becomes very common.

Wesan (ınfin) seems to have dropped out of use ın the twelfth century, leaving beon or ben as the ordinary form ın use. About the same tıme geweśen (p p.) disappeared, and a new p p ıbeon (ben) came ınto use.

In M.E. we fınd the pres. part be-ende = be-ıng.

Negatıve forms were common ın the fırst three perıods. Cp O E. neśan (am not), neart (art not), nıs (ıs not), næs (was not), nǽron (were not).

A-m (= ar-m = as-m) contaıns the root as, and m, the endıng of the fırst person.

Ar-t (= as-t) has the old -t of the second person, as ın shal-t, wıl-t, &c.

Is (= as = as-th) has lost ıts suffıx -th.

Are (= ase) represents the old Northern ar-on, and ıs of Scandınavıan orıgın. It has altogether replaced the O.E. sınd.

Was. Thıs ıs the past tense of the strong verb, wesan to be. It has therefore no endıngs to mark the fırst and thırd persons.

Was-t. The true form would be were (O.E. wǽre) but wast arose ın the fourteenth century, through the use of was as a second person ın Northern wrıters of the thırteenth century.

> " With ropes were thou bounde " > > FABYAN, Chronicle, p. 430.

> " How were thow thus baptızed? " > > MERLIN, p. 428.

> " Before the sun, before the heavens thou wert." > > MILTON, Par. Lost.

Wer-t for wast has evıdently been formed from the older were (= wǽre). It has establıshed ıtself as a subjunctıve form.

Were (= wǽ-en) has, lıke are, lost ıts personal endıngs.

The root be was conjugated in the present tense, indicative, as late as Milton's time.

I be	we be	(bin)*
thou beest	ye be	,,
he be	they be	,,

" If thou beest he." —MILTON, P. L. I. 84.

" For you be as untrue as I."

HEYWOOD, The Four P.P.

" The Philistines be upon thee."—Judges, xvi. 9.

In M. E. beth and bes are used for the third pers. sing. indic.; and for the third pers. future, instead of our shal be.

209. Worth = be.

This verb occurs in the English Bible.

" Wo worth the day "
=woe be to the day —Ezek. xxx. 2
" Wo worth the faire gemme vertuelesse !
Wo worth that herb also that doth no boote !
Wo worth that beauté that is routheless !
Wo worth that wyght that tret ech under foote ! "

CHAUCER, Tr & Cr. II 49. ll. 344-7.

The O.E weorthan (pret. wearth, p p. worden) to become, occasionally replaced wesan and beon, to be. In M. E. worthe = to be, as well as to become. In the third person worth = shall be.

" What shal worthe of us."—M. Arth l. 1817, ed Furnivall
" For-þı I conseille alle þe comune to lat the catte worthe."

One of the oldest senses of shall is owe.

"And by that faith I shal to God and yow."
CHAUCER, Tr and Cr l 1600

" Voryef me thet ich the ssel " = Forgyve me that I owe thee.
Ayenbite, p 115.

" Hu mucel scealt thû."
= How much owest thou.
Luke xvi 5.

" Ân, se hym scolde týn thûsend punda."
= One that owed him ten thousand pounds
Matt. xviii. 24.

Another early meaning arising from the notion of debt is obligation, necessity, hence shall often signifies ought, must " Be ûre æ he sceal sweltan."

= By our law he ought to diê John xix 7.

" Men seyn, ache schalle endure in that forme " MAUNDEVILIE, p 4.

" Thou shalt not steal "

" You should listen more attentively "

It must be recollected that shall is only a tense auxiliary, that is a sign of the future, in the first person. The following doggerel lines point out the distinctive uses of shall and will.

" In the first person simply shall foretells,
In will a threat, or else a promise dwells ,
Shall, in the second and the third, does threat ,
Will simply then foretells a future feat."

Grimm supposes that the original meaning of shal is I have killed, I must pay the fine or (wergeld) ; hence, I am obliged, I must. The idea of failure, offence, guilt, is seen in Sansk. skhal, to fail ; Lat. scelus, fault, crime.

A strange mingling of should and owe occurs in Fabyan's Chronicle, p. 257.

" Obedience that the should owe (= owed) to the see of Canterbury."

The original meaning of will is to desire, wish (cp Lat. volo).

In M.E we find a form wol, will, which still survives in won't = wol not. Nill = will not, occurs in Hamlet, v. 1; Taming of the Shrew, ii. 1.

In O.E. we find two weak verbs, willan and willian, to desire, wish. Willan survives in the verb will, to desire, be willing, to exercise the will, which is conjugated regularly as an independent verb. 1 will, 2 willest, 3 willeth, wills, &c., past tense willed   But we often find in the older periods the two forms mixed up.

Mayst is a new form that arose ın M.E. for mih-t, (See Chaucer's Astrolabe, p. 3).

In M.E we find some new forms, as, owest (= âge); ought and owed (= agen, p p).

The original meaning of owe is to possess, have, whence the secondary notion, to have as a duty, to owe, to be under an obligation.

Oughte is of course a weak past tense, and is now used as a present and past tense to signify moral obligation.

When owe signifies to be in debt, it is conjugated regularly.

1. Owe, 2. owest, 3. owes, oweth, &c.; past tense and p.p owed.

Ought, in older writers, is used as the past tense of owe, to be in debt.

> " Thu sulde thet thou ouhtest."
> = Thou didst pay what thou didst owe > Ancren Riwle, p 406
> " He owôte to him 10,060 talents "
> WICKLIFFE, Matt xviii 24.
> "One of his fellow servants which ought him an hundred > pence "—BECON, I 154
> " There of the Knight, the which that castle ought,
> To make abode that night he greatly was besought."
> SPENSER, F. Q VI iii 2.

See Shakspeare's I Henry IV iii 3.

Own is a derivative of owe.

Examples of owe as an independent verb :—

> " Hwæt dô ic thæt ic ôce lîf âge ? "
> = What must I do that I may have everlasting life?
> Mark, x 17.
> " Ahte ic geweald "
> = Had I power —Cæd p 23, l 32.

> " I am not worthy of the wealth I owe."
>   All's Well that Ends Well, II 5.
> " Owing her heart, what need you doubt her ear "
>   FORD

Owe as an auxiliary appears in Laȝamon's Brut, l. 8289,
" he ah to don" = he has to do, he should do
        " Evel owe no mon to do to other "
                                       Cursor Mundi, T l 1973.

216. Must.

Must was originally the past tense of the old verb, motan (Ger. mussen) to be able, be obliged it is now used in all persons and tenses, to denote necessity and obligation.

The O.E forms are : —

The old verb mot had the sense of may, can, must,
&c ; and must = might, could, &c

In the sense of may, mot is found as late as 1522 in The World and the Child.

> " But, Sir Frere, evil mot thou the [thrive] "
>   O E Plays, ed Hazlitt, p. 257

Spenser occasionally employs it though it had become archaic in his time (see Faerie Queene, 1 2, 37).

The s in must does not belong to the root, but was inserted to unite the suffix -t of the second person, and -te of the past tense to the root, most (second person) = mot-s-t = mot-t

Its infinitive to wit is used now only as an adverb = namely.

The pres. part. exists in wittingly.

For the presence of s in wist, see must, § 216, p. 181.

The pass. part. appears in unwist, unknown, times loses its personal ending -s, as " it need[1] not be "

Auxiliary Verbs.

222. Auxiliary verbs supply the places of verbal suffixes to form voice, mood, and tense.

The passive voice is expressed by the passive participle, and the verb to BE.

In O E. weorthan and wæan were used with the passive participle to form the passive voice

Should and would are often used as signs of the subjunctive mood.

The use of would, as an auxiliary of the past subjunctive, is as early as the thirteenth century.

[1] Some explain need as subjunctive = would need, but cp.
me thinc in M E. for me-thinks.

Let us a sign of the imperative mood, as, let us go = go we. See § 180, p 132.   In M.E. let was used in the same way as do = cause, make.

The tense auxiliars are (1) have, had; and is,
was (with intransitive verbs) for the perfect tenses;
as, "he has asked," "he is come."

(2) Shall and will for the future; but other shades of a future tense may be expressed by various modes, as, "I am going to see him;" "I am about to see him;" "I am upon the point of seeing him," &c.

(3) Do and did are used for forming emphatic tenses, as, "I do see," "I did see"

Do and did originally had a causative sense before another verb in the infinitive.

> "Thou most do me it have "
> = Thou must cause him to have it > Gamelyn, 1 159
> " And som-tyme doth Theseus hem to reste "
> = And sometimes Theseus makes them to rest > Knightes Tale.

In the fourteenth century did was not uncommon as a mere tense auxiliary.

> " Summe gouleden and summe dude brenne."
> = Some yelled and others did burn —O E Misc. p. 224.

In M E. gan, can, con (began) was used for did.

CHAPTER XI

Adverbs.

223 Adverbs are, for the most part, abbreviations of words or phrases, or cases of nouns, adjectives, and pronouns.

According to their origin or form, we may divide them into the following classes :—

224 I. Adverbs derived from Nouns and Adjectives.

Genitive.—Need-s = of necessity, M E nedes, E E. nêde (instr.).

A-night-s, now-a-day-s, al-way-s, be-time-s, el-se (O E. elles), eft-soon-s, un-a-ware-s, on-ce, twi-ce, thri-ce, whil s-t, a-mid-s-t, a-mong-s-t, be-twi-x-t.

Twice = O E twi-wa, E E. twi-e, M E twies; thrice = O E. thri-wa, E E. thrie, M E thries , -wa = -war = time ; once, O.E ane, E E. ene, M.E. an-es, on-es, an-s, on-s

The -st in whilst, &c represents an older -es(-s) Cp M E whil-es, amidd-es, among-es, &c.

Dative.—Whil-om (O.E. hwil-um). from while = time. Seld-om (O.E seld-um) from O.E. seld = rare.

All adverbs ending in -meal once had the dative suffix -um Cp O E. lim-mæl-um = limb-meal The suffix -um formed distributives like Latin -im   Cp M E. table-mele = Latin tabillatim —Palladius on Husbandrie, p 66

Little by little = M E lytlum and lytlum.

Accusative.—Alway (O.E ealne-weg), otherwise, sometime, the while, now-a-day, backward, &c.

Prepositional Forms.—The chief prepositions used to form adverbial expressions are, a, (an), on,
in, at, of, be, (by), to.

An (= in, on: anon = in one second. In M E.

A = in, on. a-bed, a-day, a-sleep, a-loft, &c.; a-broad, a-cold, a-good, a-twain, &c

On, in: on sleep, on high, in-deed, in vain, in short, in two, &c

At: at jar, at odds, at large, at night, at length, at best, at first, &c.

Of (for a): of-kin, of late, of old, of new[c];
Of (for older genitives), of a truth, of right.

Be, by: be-times, be-cause, by turns, by degrees, by hundreds.

To: to-day, to-night, to-gether
Per: per-chance, per-haps

An (= in, on) occurs in E E and M E before words beginning with a vowel or h; as, an eve, in the evening , an honde, in hand
A is used before words beginning with a consonant
     "Ich am an elder than ich was a wintre and a lore "—O E.
          Hom ii. 220
This a was a separate word as late as the seventeenth century
It is very common before verbal nouns Cp a-fishing, a-hunting, a-weeping.
As on is only another form of an, it has replaced an before a vowel

"Set our teeth an edge [= on edge]."
The Four Book of Princes, p. 116.

A and on, sometimes occur side by side : a-board and on board, a-ground and on ground

An takes the place of in, in the phrase "ever and anon ," where an-on = M E in oon, in one state

"Ever in oon"—CHAUCER, Astrolabe, p 15

"Ever and anon it (earth) must turn about."

Sometimes an end = in oon = continually

As of takes the place of a in akin, &c so a sometimes takes the place of of

"I have heard a the horses walking a' (on) the top of Paules."
—DEKKER, Satiromastix,[*] C. 2

"What manner a man."—BECON.

Cp. "a the appel tre" = o that appel tre = of the apple tree—C Mundi, p 86

This a for o or of explains , man-a-war, justice-a-peace (Dekker) , two-a-clock = two a' clock = two o' the clock ; jack-an-apes.

In M.E we find of long, of new, of-fer (afar), and even of goo = goo (cp O E. ofgān, to go off).

Be sometimes preceded the dative adverb in O E as be ānfealdum = by one fold = singly, from which we have formed our expressions, by hundreds and by fiftes = O E. be hundredum and be fiftegum In E E the dative ending dropped, and we have bī seven, bī seove, = by sixes, by sevens, &c Cp. by piecemeal for piecemeal, (Beaumont and Fletcher)

At especially before superlatives is a contraction of at the, M E atte In O E this the was in the dative case. At random = Fr à randon

225 Many adjectives are used as adverbs, especially those with irregular comparisons : far, forth, ful, ill, late, little, much, nigh, near, well.

Many monosyllabic adjectives are used as adverbs, as, to work hard; to talk fast; to speak loud; to aim high.

In the earlier stages of the language, the adverbial form was marked by a final -e, as, hard (adj.), harde (adv.), &c   When this -e became silent, then the adjectival and adverbial form became identical.

We ·can thus easily understand the use of godly as adjective and adverb; (cp. "a godly life," and "to live godly.")   In O E the distinction was plainly marked, e g, god-lıc (adj.), god-lıc-e (adv.).

The adverbial -e was probably a dative suffix. In M E we find instances of the use of this -e: they pleye hastiliche and swiftliche (Trevisa).

In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, the suffix -ly was often dropped .   as,

"Foolish bold."   "Grievous sick."
       BECON.   SHAKESPEARE.
Cp. " Wondrous wise "
The history of wondrous (wonderfully) is a curious one   In O E the adverb was wundr-um, which in M E became wundes, wonder, T.E wonders   In E E we find wonderloche, in M E wonderis, and in T.E wonderly.   In Ford's works we find " woundy bad," i e wonderfully or very bad 226 II. Pronominal Adverbs.

Many adverbs are derived from the pronominal stems, the, he, who.

PRONOMINAL STEMS	PLACE WHERE.	MOTION TO	MOTION FROM	TIME WHEN	MANNER	CAUSE.
who	where	whither	whence	when	how	why the	there	thither	thence	then	thus	the
he	here	huther	hence	—	—	—

The suffixes -re and -ther in the-re, he̩-re, whe-re, thi-ther, &c., were originally locative.

The -n in the-n, whe-n, &c., is an accusative suffix. See pronouns, § 131, p. 107 ; § 146, p. 119.

The -ce (M.E. -es), in then-ce, &c., represents an older -an, cp. O E. than-an (thence), heon-an (hence); hwan-an (whence).

The O.E. -an denotes motion from: ǽst-an=from the east, so thenc̶e̶=than-an = from that (place).

The, before comparatives, as the more (= O E. thȳ máre, Lat eo magis) is the instrumental case of the definite article, the.

Lest has lost the instrumental the. In O E we find thȳ lǽs the, E E. les the, M.E leste = lest.

Thus is the instrumental case of this.

How (O.E. hu, E.E. huw̨) ⸱⸱⸱ why 'O F h̶·⸱) are the inst. cases of who. C. ⸱ ⸱ ⸱. ⸱⸱ ⸱ .
(reason), wherefore, for-thy = for that (reason), therefore

Yea, ye-s, ye-t, are from a relative stem ya, which also had a demonstrative force, as in yon, yond, yonder.

That and so are often used as affirmative adverbs.

In nay, no, not, now, we have a demonstrative stem, na.

In O E. ne = not
  " Eart thû of thyses leorningcnihtum ? nic ne eom ic."
  = Art thou of this man's disciples ? not I, I am not John xviii. 17.
Negatives are often repeated for emphasis.
  " Ne nán ne dorste nán thing âcsian."
  = No one durst ask him anything.
                                        Matt. xxii. 46.

" Ne com ic nd Crist."—John i. 18

" But he ne lefte nought for rayn ne thonder "

CHAUCER, Prol. l. 492.

O E. ne was also a conjunction = nor. See Spenser, Faerie Queene, I. i. 28.

Not (= O.E. nôht, M.E. noght, nat) = no whit, (nothing), has replaced the old nâ, ne. It has already been shown to be an indefinite pronoun. See aught, § 164, p. 125.

" Ne wen thu nowiht leone feder that tu affeare me swa = ne lef thu nawt leone feder that tu offeare me swa.
    Ween thou not dear father that thou may frighten me so."—Juliana, pp. 12, 13

" Ac hit ne helpeth heom nowiht "—O E. Misc. p. 152.

Aught, naught, nothing, something, some-what, muchwhat, anywhit, &c. may be used as adverbs.

So (= O E swâ) was used as a relative pronoun in E.E.; from it we derive also (O.E. ealswâ), which, by loss of l, has dwindled down to as = M.E. als = E.E. alse = O E. eal-swa.

Ay, sometimes used for yes, is the same as the adverb aye = ever.

For ever or aye we find in O E a , E E o, oo, ay, ey. Cp. O.E. â-hwar, æg-hwær = any-where; E.E. o-whar, ohwaer.

What (O E hwæt) = why (Lat. quid) is an adverb :—

" What do you prate of service ?"

SHAKESPEARE, Cor. iii. 3.

227. III. Adverbs formed from Prepositions.

Aft, in "fore and aft," O.E. æf-t-an, after. Af is another form of of (= from). Cp. af-ter, af-ter-wards.

Be, by, by and by, hard-by, be-sides, be-hind, b-ut be-neath, &c.

For, for-th, for-thwith, a-fore, forward (= M E. forth-ward).

Fro = from; "to and fro."

In, with-in, E.E. in-with; M E. bin = O E. binnan = within Neath, be-neath, under-neath.

Cp. ne-ther, O E. ni-ther, and Sansk. ni = down.

On, on-ward, on-wards.

Of, -off, a-down (O.E. of dún = from the hill). See

To, too; to ward, &c.

Through, thorough, thoroughly, throughly.

Up, up-per, up-wards, upp-er-most.

Out, with-out, a-b-out, b-ut. (See Preposi-tions. § 230, p. 195. § 231, p. 196.)

228. IV. Compound Adverbs.

Many are given under the head of prepositional forms. (See § 224, p. 188)

There, here, and where, are combined with (1) prepositions, (2) adverbs, (3) indefinite pronouns to form compound adverbs:—there-of, there-to, there- from, thereby, &c.; where-so-ever, where-ever, &c., else-where, some-where, no-where.

o

Everywhere = ever-y-where, E.E. ever ihwar (Ancren Riwle, p 200), y-where = E E i-hwar, i-hwer = O E ge-hwær There was a M E oywhere, oywhere [which was also combined with ever] = O E æg-hwær, everywhere Cp O E ihwær, M E. awher, owher, owwher = anywhere

In O E we have very few compounds of there, here, and where, with prepositions , but they are numerous in E E

The pronominal adverbs and their compounds, as where, where-of, where-to, have the force of relative pronouns

The compounds of there, here, where, with prepositions are almost all archaic   We replace there-of, there-to, &c by of that, of it, to that, to it, &c , where-of, &c by of which, &c and here in, &c by in this, &c

These compounds, being followed by the preposition, resemble the construction of that, and the O E indeclinable relative the.

"Thæt bed the se lama on læg "
= The bed that the lame man lay on
= The bed whereon [= on which] the lame man lay Mark 11 4.
" The ston that he leonede to."
= The stone whereto he leant.
                                            Vernon MS.

Some elliptical expressions containing a verb are used as adverbs, as may-be, may-hap, how-be it, as it were, to be sure, to wit.

CHAPTER XII.

Prepositions.

229. Prepositions are so named, because they were originally prefixed to the verb to modify its meaning. Many prepositions still preserve their adverbial meaning (cp. for-swear, be-times, &c.). Some relations denoted by prepositions may be expressed by case-endings. Prepositions are either simple or compound.

230. I Simple Prepositions.

At (O.E æt, Lat. ad).

By (O.E. be, bi) The original meaning is about, concerning Another form of it is O.E. umbe, M.E. umb, um, cp. Gr ἀμφί, Lat. amb, am.

For (O E. for, Lat. pro).

Fro-m (O E fram).

Fro (E E. fra).

The m in from is a superlative suffix The roots for and fro are connected with each other, and with far and fore. Cp. Lat. pro, per, præ.

In, on (O.E. in, on, an, Gr. ἐν, Lat. in).

Of, off (O E. of = from, Lat. ab, Gr. ἀπό).

O 2

Out (O.E. út, cp. utter, utmost)
To (O.E. tó). It has often been the sense of "for."
Up (O E up, Lat. s-ub).
With (O.E with, wither, from, against). We have preserved the original force of with in with-stand &c. The sense of the Lat. cum was usually expressed in O E. by mid; Goth. mith, Gr. μετα.

231. II Compound Prepositions.

(1) Comparatives.

Af-ter (O E. æf-ter), is a comparative of the root af = of = from. The suffix -ter is the same as -ther in whe-ther, &c.

Ov-er (O E. of-er, Goth. uf-ar; Lat. s-uper, Gr. ὑπέρ), is a comparative of the root of or or uf. We have the same root in O.E ufe-weard, E E. uvç-weard = upward, a-b-ove   ; - Un-der (O E under, Lat inter) contains the root in and the comparative suffix -der = -ther.

In E E. under = between; under that = between that; meanwhile.

Through (O.E. thur-h; Gr. dur-ch), contains the same root as the Lat. tra-ns, frcm the root thar or tar, to go beyond, to cross.

(2) Prepositions compounded with Prepositions.

B-ut (O E. b-ut-an, = be-ut-an, bi-ut-an) = be (by) + ut (out).
A-b-out (O.E á-b-utan = á-be-ut'an) = a (on) + be (by) + out.

A-b-ove (O.E. b-uf-an = be-uf-an) = a<ton> + be (by) + ove (up)

Unto (M E. until), is a compound of unt and to The same root exists in Goth. und, O E. óth = onth = unto

In-to, up-on, be-fore, with-in, through out, be-neath, under neath, &c.

(3) PREPOSITIONS FORMED FROM NOUNS.

A-gain, a-gain-s-t (O E on-geán, tó-gegnes)

A-mong (O E ge-mong, on-ge-mong, E E on-mang, bi-mong), a = on, mong = *ming-*l-ing, mixing Cp. E E monglen, to mix, monglung = mingling

> Other prepositions of this sort are in-stead of = in the place of, (stead = place) = in lieu of, in behalf of, by dint of, by way of; for the sake of, a-breast of, a-board, a-head of, a-cross, be-side; in spite of = in despite of. Sometimes we find; d-spite = in despite of me. Cp the use of maugre (Fr malgré) in M E maugre min, in spite of me, maugre thaires = in spite of them.

(4) ADJECTIVE PREPOSITIONS

E-re (O.E. ær-r, M E er, ar, or), before. See § 116. p 95

Or, the M.E form or = ar = ere occurs in the authorised version of the Bible. See Ps. xc 2 , Prov. viii 23.

Or ere (= or ♦ = er er), is a mere reduplicat on, like an if See King John, iv 3 , Tempest, i. 2 , Hamlet, 1 2.   It seems to have acquired the sense of ere ever.   See Wright's Bible Word Book, p. 353.

Till (O E. til good, O N. til to).   In M E we find till used as a sign of the infinitive ; it formed numerous compounds as intil = into, &c.

Along (O E. and-lang, E E an-lang, M.E. ende-long, endelonges).

We sometimes find alongst (= alonges).

> " Alongst the lee shore "
> WEBSTER, Northward Ho

" To lie along," = to lie at full length.

There is another along (O E ge lang), in the phrase "along of," " long of," = on account of.

> " On hire is al mi lif ilong "
> O E Misc p 158
> " But if it is along on me "
> GOWER, Spec E Eng xx 55
> " And that is long of contrarie causes "
> HOLLAND, Pliny, p 25
> " All long of this vile traitor Somerset "
> 1 Hen VI iv 3
> " And this is long of her "
> FORD.

A-mid, a-midst (O E on-mydd-um; M E. a-muddes, a-mudde, in-middes), contains the preposition a (on) and the adjective mid in middle, mid-most, &c.

Other prepositions of this kind are, a-round, a-slant, &c , an-ent, respecting = O E. on-efn, on-emn, near, toward = E E on-efen-t = M.E anentes, anence , a-thwart = acro-s , (O E on thwork Cp thwworh = perverse ; Icel thvert, the acc neut. of thverr, across, transverse) , be-low, be-twixt (O E be-twox) from two , be-tween (O E be-twoon-um) from twain.

Since (O E. sith-than; E E. sith-then, sith-the M.E. sithenes, sith, sin, sins), from sith = late, O.E. si-thor later; cp since when.

O.E. sith-than = later than, after that.

(5) VERBAL PREPOSITIONS.

These are new forms that have arisen out of the participial (dative) construction: owing to, notwith-standing, out-taken, (replaced by except)

We have numerous participial forms of Romanic origin, as, according to, concerning, during, except, re-specting, saving, touching.

Save = M E sauf, except. See Chaucer, Knightes Tale, l. 2182.

Sans (Fr.) = sine (Lat) has gone out of use. It was occasionally employed by Shakespeare.

CHAPTER XIII.

Conjunctions.

232. Prepositions join words, one of which is subordinate to the other. Conjunctions join sentences, and co-ordinate terms. Conjunctions are of comparatively late growth, and have sprung from other parts of speech, especially from pronouns, adverbs, and prepositions.

(1) Pronominal.—Yet (O.E. gy-t), if (O.E. gif, M.E. yt-f, ef, if), yea (O.E. gea), an-d

With and is connected the archaic conjunction an = if.

And is very often written for an by older writers.

" ,·, { v·; ; ';·,·· ··· '·'··· ·· '·'· ; ; ····· ·· ··· ··· ··· ··· ; ··,· ; ··· ···· "
· · · ' · ,   ,   3

"I pray thee, Launce, and if thou seest my boy, Bid him make haste "

Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii. 1.

We occasionally find but and if = but if; M E but-if = unless.

We have lost the O E ge—ge, both—and ; ac, but ; ne—ne, neither—nor , swa—swa, as well—as ; oththe—oththe, either—or , sam—sam, the—the, whether—or ; the or thy; and for-thy , for-tham(than)-the, be-tham-the = for that that, by that that, because ; nu—nu = now—now.

For-why is scarce now   It occurs in the Psalms (Prayer Book).

Either—or; neither—nor; or—or, nor—nor, have the same origin as the indefinite pronouns, either and neither. See § 168, p 127.

Or is a corruption of either (O E áwther, áther) and nor of nether (O E. náither)   In M E. we find other—other = either κ nother—nother = neither—nor

     " Put not thy fyngerys in thy dysche, Nothyr in flesche nothir in fysche "
                       Babees Book, p 18
     " As trewe as steel ether stoon "
                        Ib p 40

See Luke vi 42

El-se, the genitive of el (= other), is often supplied by otherwise.

So gives rise to also, as, and whereas, the is the root of though, (O E. theá-h) although, then, then, that, &c.

The stem of who occurs in what—and (M E what—what = both , and), whether, whence, &c

(2) Adverbial (from nouns) —Lskewise. (= in likewise), sometimes, at times, whilst, otherwhiles, besides, be-cause, on the contrary, in order that, &c

To the end that (Ex vii 22) = O E tó tham thet = to that that.

In O E. hwíl-um—hwíl-um, hwíle—hwíle = sometimes—sometimes

    " One while (the moon) bended pointwise into tips of horns, another whiles divided just in the half, and anon again in a compasse round, spotted sometime and darke, and ...

(3) Adverbial (from adjectives) —Both—and, even, only, now—anon, furthermore, for as much as, evermore, lastly, firstly, finally, &c.   Lest = O E thý læs the, lies the, M E leste, natheles = O E. ná thý læs = nevertheless, unless = E.E. onlesse.

Not only—but also = O E nalæs that án that—ac elc swá, as soon as = sóna swá—swá   In M E. we find na the mo = never the more

(4) Prepositional, many of which have come in along with the demonstrative that.—Ere, after, before, but, for, since, in that, with that, till (= to), until (= unto).

In O E óth that = until, E E a thet, M E for-to, for-te, fort (that), to that = until.   Sometimes the while til, and while itself, do duty for until

For has sometimes the sense of in order to (see Gen xxxi 18, Ex xvi 27).

(5) Verbal.—Say, suppose, to talk of, considering, provided, were it not, how be it, &c.

CHAPTER XIV

Interjections.

233 Interjections have no grammatical relation to other words in a sentence and are not strictly speaking 'parts of speech.' They are either mere exclamations or cries, as, O! ah! eigh! fy! or else elliptical expressions, as good bye = god b' wi' ye = God be with you

Zounds = God's wounds, marry = the Virgin Mary, grammercy = great thanks

Alas, alack, Fr hélas, from las (sad), Lat. lassus

234 Some words (adverbs, verbs). are used as interjections . how, well, out, hence, begone, look, behold. Cp hail! all hail = O E wes thu hál = hale be thou, O E. wes hál has become wassail See The Blickling Homilies, ed. Morris, pp 3, 5.

A few primitive interjections have come down to us from the oldest English; ha, eh (O E ea), lo, la, (O E lá), heigh (hig), wod ('') E wá), well-a-way, well-a-day (O.E. wá-lá-wá = woe-lo woe, what (O.E. hwæt).

CHAPTER XV.

Derivation and Word formation.

235 The primary elements and significant parts of words are called roots, as tal in talk and tell; bar, in bear, bairn, birth, &c.

The root is modified (1) by endings called suffixes which form derivatives, as, *rich-*ly, *nest-*ling; (2) by particles, placed before the root, called prefixes, which form compounds, as, for-bid, un-true.

Two words may be placed together to form com-pound words, as, blackbird.

SUFFIXES OF TEUTONIC ORIGIN.

FROM DEMONSTRATIVE ROOTS.

236. I. Noun Suffixes.

Some suffixes have sprung from old demonstrative or pro-nominal roots; others are merely altered forms of nouns and adjectives. The origin of the former is very obscure; that of the latter tolerably certain Cp *beauts-*ful, *love-*ly, *glad-*some. &c. See Suffixes of Predicative origin, § 238, p 209 Many words have an old vowel suffix, as, -ale = O.E. eal-u, -hue = O.E. haw-w.

It must be borne in mind—

(1) That many prefixes and suffixes have no longer a living power, that is, are not now used to form new derivatives, as the prefix for in for-swear, and the suffix -m in *glea*m, &c

(2) That many derivatives were formed from certain ancient roots or stems in the oldest period of our language , as flight from *fledg*an, not from the modern fly.

-d gives a kind of passive signification to words, formed from verbal roots   dee-d from do = that which is done   Cp. floo-d from flow; glee-d (a live coal) from glow; see-d from sow.

er (O E. ere), denoting the agent or doer: bak-er, speak-er, mill-er.

Sometimes we find -ar, -or for -er; begg-ar, schol-ar, sail-or.
Under N Fr. influence i or y has crept in before -er; as, law-y-er, glaz-i-er, cloth-i-er.
-man is added to -er in fish-er-man
-t has crept into bragg-ar-t, and -d into dast-ar-d, loll-ar-d (M E. lollere).

-est; earn-est, harv-est.

-ing, the ending of verbal nouns, O.E. -ung, as, learn-ing, writ-ing, &c.

-ing (O.E -ing) forming diminutives : as, farth-ing (from fourth), tith-ing (from tithe = tenth), rid-ing (from thrid = third).

This suffix occurs in a few nouns without adding a diminutival force to them:—kın-g (O E cyn-ing) —shıll-ing, penn-y(O E. *pen*ıg), ...

-l-ing, made up of -l and -ing, forms diminutives: dar-ling (from dear), gos-ling, strip-ling, un-ler-ling.

The addition of the suffix -k has produced dear, goose, and _____ , _____ ; _____ Cp. nation and
_____ , _____ , _____ , _____ .

-k: haw-k, mil-k, yol-k.

-kin (= -k + -in) forms diminutives · as, lamb-kin, lad-kin, fir-kin (from four)

It forms patronymics in Daw-kin (from David), Per-kins (from Peter).

-le, denoting agent or instrument· as, bead-le, (from O.E. beodan, to pray); bund-le (from bind); steep-le (from steep), sett-le (from seat), thumb-le (from thumb)

We find this l in angle, apple, bramble, fiddle, saddle, shambles, fowl, haul, heel, nail, sail, stile, (from sty, to go up)

-l, -le (O E -els, Ger. -el)· as, buri-al, brid-le, gird-le, ndd-le (from O E rad-en, to read, interpret, advise), skitt-les (from O E sceót-an, to shoot), shewel (a scarecrow)

-m (O E -ma, -m Cp. Lat no-men): bar-m (from bear), bloo-m (from blow), doo-m (from do)· glea-m (from glow), qual-m (from quell), sea-m (from sew), strea-m (from strew, to scatter, spread), tea-m (from tow, tug), stea-m (from stew).

It takes the form of -om in bloss-om, bos-om, fath-om.

-n (of the same origin as the -n in passive participles)· bair-n (from bear), beac-on (from beck), burd-en (from bear), heav-en (from heave), maid-en, mai-n (from mag, to be great), wagg-on, wai-n (from wag).

In chick-en (from cock), the suffix has a dim̃ · form· f. ce; kitt-en (from cat) = M E. ·· cur. We also find ·· meaning a kitten.

-en in vix-en (from fox) was once a common sign of the feminine.

-nd (an old present participial ending): err-and, fi-end (from O E. fi-an, to hate), freo-nd (from freo-n, to love), wi-nd (from wa, to blow).

-ness (O E. -nis, -nes), forming abstract nouns from nouns and adjectives; as, wit-ness, wilder-ness; dark-ness, good-ness, &c.

-ock (O E. -uca), forming diminutives and patronymics · as, bull-ock, hill ock; pill-ock (a little pill), Poll ock (from Paul), Wil-cox, Wil-c-ock (from Will).

In the Scotch dialects we find ladd-ock, wif-ock This -ock becomes -ick, or -ie (-y), as, lass-ick, lass-ie. Cp. mamm-y, dadd-y.

-r (instrumental)· fing-er (from fang, to take) lai-r (from lie), stai-r (from sty, to climb), timb-er (from . . . . . w-t er 'f-ar . . .' w . ' er '. . . . . .'
-ster (O ! . . . .
gender: as, spin-ster.
It merely marks the agent in song-ster, huck-ster, malt-ster, young-ster.

Upholsterer or upholster, is a corruption of upholder.

-s: blis-s (from blithe), eave-s. It also appears in adze, axe.

-th, -t (of the same origin as the d in seed, &c). It is used, for the most part, to form abstract nouns from verbs and adjectives: as, dear-th (from dear), wid-th (from wide), heal-th (from hale), leng-th (from long), slo-th (from slow), dea-th (from die), bir-th (from bear), ear-th (from ear, to plough)

Drough-t₂(from dry, O E. drig) : heigh-t (from high), len-ten (from long).

Dnf-t (from drive). fligh-t (from fly, O E. flēogan), . f t (fleoge) . : .. t t' . ı m. ŋ.. O F n .). slaugh-t ı: .ıı ı:. .ı:. O I . . ı .ı.ı . . ıt .ı ı .ı . ı ., O L. .ıı ı ıı.ı .ıı ı.: .ı .. t . ıım drıca or ıı.ıc. O E. dragan), fros-t, beques-t.

The suffix t for th ıs due to the sharp sounds f, gh (orıgın╌lly h), s.   In O E. th was always sounded flat, as ın thıra.

-ther, -ter, marking the agent : bro-ther, fa-ther mo-ther, daugh-ter, sıs-ter, fos-ter (from food).

-ther, -ter, -der, marking the instrument; bla-dder, (from blow), fea-ther (from root fat, to fly), wea-ther (from wa, to blow), fo-dder (from fa, to feed), la-dder (from root hli, to climb), mur-der (from mar, to kill).   Ru-dder (from row), laugh-ter.

-y (O.E. -ig, -h) : bod-y, hon-ey.   It has become -ow ın holl-ow, sall-ow, marr-ow, &c.

-ow also arıses out of (1) O E -u —mall-ow, mead-ow, shad-ow   (2) O E ewe —swallow 237. II. Adjective Suffixes.

-d (like the d in dee-d, &c) : bol-d, col-d, lou-d, love-d, feathere-d, foote-d, &c.   See p 205.

-ish (O.E -ısc) forms patronymics, as, Eng-lish, Wel-sh, Ir-ish.   It sıgnifies some-what, rather, in green-ish, whıt-ish, &c. ; it marks contempt and de-preciatıon, in book-ish, outland-ish, hogg-ish.

-le, -l (O.E. el, -ol) · brıtt-le (from O E bryttan, to break), id-le, lıtt-le (O.E. lyt, few), fıck-le, gr∍pp-le (graspıng, greedy), new-fang-le d (= taken up with new things, (from O.E fangan, to take), suck-le (un-steady), forget-ful = M E. for-get-el (O.E. for-gut-ol).

-en, made of. It originally signified of or be-longing to : as, flax-en, gold-en, wood-en, &c.

There was once a very large number of adjectives in -en : as, ashen, oaken, glassen, &c. The extensive use that could be once made of this suffix may be seen from the following passage —

" God h m rol a th m lnd th r...
 1   .   ,
 W,, ..   .
With firen piler apon the night "—Cursor Mundi, G ll Clouden piler = pillar of cloud.   [6195-6.
Firen piler = pillar of fire.

-en (participial)   bound-en, molt-en, &c

-r, -er (O E. -or, -er, -r): butt-er from bute, slipp-er-y ; cp. M E. slid-er (slippery), lith-er (bad), wak-er (watchful), flicker = flik-er (= fickle, flickering)

-er and -n are combined in east-er-n, north-er-n, south-er-n, west-er-n.

-t: brigh-t, lef-t, ligh-t, righ-t, swif-t. See -t, p 207.

th: fif-th, six-th, seven-th.

-y (O E. -ig) an-y, blood-y, clay-ey, craft-y, dirt-y, &c., sill-y (O.E sæl-ig).

-ow arises out of an older -u —call-ow, fall-ow, narr-ow, yell-ow 238. II. Suffixes from Predicative Roots.

(1) Nouns.

-craft (O.E. cræft) : priest-craft, witch-craft, wood-craft.

-kind (O.E. cyn) = kin : man-kin-d, woman-kin-d.

P

In E E and M E we find fowl kin, worm-kin, &c. In M E. kin, instead of being used after the noun, was put between the numeral and noun, hence it is mostly found in the genitive case.

> " Mones cunnes vfel " > = Evil of many a kind
> " For nones kunnes mede "
> = For meed of no kind
> " Alles kunnes bokes " > = Books of every kind.

In M E we find alskyns, noskyns, no skynnes, naken, vhat-kin Cp Dan alskens, "of every sort"

The phrase no kin became also no kind of, and no manner, no manner of, &c Cp. the following from the Cursor Mundi —

> " Of nankines worm euer is made "—G l. 1961?
> " O nakin worm þat es made "—G l 1961
> " Of no maner worm þat is made "—T l. 1961

239 IV. Adverbial Suffixes.

   The demonstrative suffixes -s, -m, -nce, have already been treated of under adverbs, §§ 224, 226, pp 187, 188, 191
   The following are of predicative origin :—
   -ly (O E. -lice) · bad-ly, on-ly, lone-ly (= al-one-l)), utter-ly, willing-ly   See -ly, p 212
   -ling, -long (O.E· -lunga, -linga) · head-long, flat-ling, dark-ling, side-ling side-long.

   In M E we find the genitive form -lynges (linges) in groflynges = groveling (prone), hedlinges = headlong
         " I'll run headlongs by and by "
                              WEBSTER, Northward Ho
         " Hurlet (hurl'd) hym doun hedlynges."
                              The Gest Hystoriale, l 7485 Nose linges, naselynge, noslynges (supine, with the nose upward), handlinges (hard to hand)

-meal (O E. -mǣlum, from mǣl, division, meal):
limb-meal, piece-meal, flock-meal.

-ward, -wards: hither-ward, down-wards, upwards. See p. 213.

-wise (see p. 213): other-wise, no-wise, like-

This suffix had once a reflexive or passive signification. Cp learn from M E. leren

-r (frequentative or intensitive). ling-er, (O.E. leng-an, to delay), flitt-er, glitt-er, glimm-er, welt-er.

Stagger = M E stakeren. ₁For change of consonant before the suffix, cp dribb-le from drip, &c.

s: ble-ss (O.E. blēt-s-s-an, from blot, sacrifice), clean-se, tru-s-t, cla-s-p (from clap), gra-s-p, (from grap), li-s-p (from lip).

Rinse = Fr rincer (= rins-er, from a root found in Goth, hrain-jan, to cleanse , hrains, pure, clean Ger rein, pure.)

241. COMPOSITION.

Two or more words joined together to make a single term, expressing a new notion, are called Compounds: as, black-bird, rail-road, rain-bow, &c

The accent distinguishes a compound word from the mere collocation of two terms, as blackbird and black bird. The hyphen is used to denote a compound, as, passer-by, man-of-war, coast-line, &c.

Notice the shortening of the long vowel in compounds, as, breakfast, shepherd; vineyard (= M E. wyn̄yard).

Compound words form nouns, adjectives, verbs, and adverbs.

I. Noun-Compounds.

Noun and noun :—

Noontide, churchyard, oaktree, doomsday, kinsman, herdsman, man-killer, &c.

There are many similar old compounds whose elements are so fused together that we do not recognize them at first sight.
Bridal = bride-ale
Bandog = band-dog, Holinshed has band-dog or tie-dog.
Gospel = god-spell = good-word
Nostril = nose-thrill = nose-hole (O E. thyrel = hole).
Orchard = wort- (herb) yard (garden), O E ort-g̃ard.
Nightingale = night singer (O E nihte-gale).
Hand-y-work = O.E. hand̃geweorc, hand work [1]
Cp. everywhere = E.E. ever-ihwer = O E æfre + gehwaar.

2. Substantive and adjective :—

Alderman, freeman, blackbird, midnight, upperhand,

(M.E. over-hand), fore-thought, neighbour = O.E. neáh-bur = nigh dweller, twilight, fortnight, &c.

3 Substantive and pronoun :—

Self-will, self-esteem, self-sacrifice.

(4) Substantive and verb :—

Bakehouse, pickpocket, telltale, spendthrift, godsend, windfall.

II. Adjective-Compounds.

1. Substantive and Adjective :—

Blood-red, snow-white, sea-sick, heart-sick, fire-proof, praise-worthy.

2. Adjective and substantive :—

Bare-foot, bare-foot-ed. Cp. O.E clǽn-heort = having a clean heart, án-eage = one-eye d, four-footed, &c.

3. Adjective and adjective :—

Fool-hardy (fool = foolish). Cp. mad-hardy, blue-green, rathe-ripe.

4 Participial combinations :—

(a) Noun and pres part : earth-shaking, heart-rending, match-making.

(b) Adjective and pres. part. : ill-looking, time-serving.

(c) Noun and pass. part : earth-born, chap-fallen, heart-broken, thunder-struck.

(d) Adjective and pass. part. : new-made, well-bred, dead-drunk, &c.

III. Verb-Compounds.

1. Noun and verb: backbite, hoodwink, henpeck, waylay.

2. Adjective and verb: dry-nurse, white-wash

- 3. Verb and adverb doff = do off, don = do on (p cross-question.

For compound adverbs, see § 228, p 193, 194.

242 COMPOSITION WITH PARTICLES OF ENGLISH ORIGIN.

I. Inseparable Particles.

a- (O E. on, E E an) on · a back, a-bed, a-board, aboo, a bey nt a ba, a b a a, b b a a, a n n a i A·

1 The original form occurs in an-on (in one moment) an-ent (see p 188), a-c-knowledge (O E oncnáwan), an-vil (O E an-filt)

2 A- (O E of, off, from) a-down = O E of dûne, from — 3. A- (O E. â-, Goth us- = out of, from), a-rise, a-rouse, 2-f-frighted, a-wake, a-light ; a-go = passed by.

"All this world schal a-go."
O E Misc p 160.

We have a prefix a- in a-ghast, a-shamed, a-feard, a frighted, but it is difficult to say whether its original meaning was out of (O E. a- = Goth us-), or from (O E. of).

4. A- (O.E. and- Ger ent-, back). A-long (O E. and-lang, M E ende-long, E.E. an-long, M E on-long)   An-swer (O E and sxarван), en-lighten (O E onlyhtan).

A bide (O E an-bīdan, on-bīdan, and bīdan).

A-gain, a gainst (O E on-gean, Ger ent-gegen).

Cp e-lope (Du. ont-loopen, Ger. ent-laufen).

5. A- (O.E. ge-), a-ware (O E ge-wær, M E i-war), a-like (O E ge-līc, ME ı-lıch, e-lıche, a-lıche, o-lıke).

6   A- (O.E. ǽ ever): a-ught, e-ı-ther.

at- (O.E. æt-): at-one, at-onement, t-wit (O.E. æt-wītan, to reproach).

The preposition at is used as a sign of the infinitive in M E. At do has become corrupted into a-do , we find also to-do (= a-do) used as a substantive.

> " Ware we neuer wont a stele."
>> Cursor Mundi, T. l 4910.

> " For ware we neuer wont at stele."—Ib. C.

be- (O.E. be-, bī- = by̌).   See Adverbs, p. 188.

(1) It renders intransitive verbs transitive, as be-queath, be-speak. be-think.

(2) It is intensitive in be-daub, be-smear, &c   ~~We~~ find this use of the prefix very common in M.E., as be-bleed, be-drive, be-bark, &c.

(3) With substantives it forms verbs, be-friend, be-troth, and a few others of recent origin.

(4) It enters into the composition of nouns, as be-half, be-hest, be-hoof, be-quest, by-name, by-path, by-word, &c.; and of prepositions and adverbs, as be-fore, be-sides, b-ut, &c Bye-law probably contains the Scandinavian " by," a town.

Be-head = O E heafdian, E E bi-heaueden, to decapitate.
Be-lieve = O E ge-lyfan, M E beleuen.
Be-reave = O E reafian, E E bireauen.
Be-gin = O E on-ginnan, E E bi-ginnen
Be-wray is a corruption of the O E on-wreon, to discover ;
O.E be-wreon, signified to cover , the be is perhaps due to the M E bi-traien, to betray
In be-ware we have the verb be (imper) and the adjective ware (= cautious)

for- (O.E. for-). The original meaning of this prefix was through, thorough, like Lat. per for-swear (Lat per-jurare), for-bid, for-bear, for-get, for-give, for-lorn, fore-go (= for-go). The p p. fore-gone is rare

For-do occurs also in the place of the modern do for. Cp.
Lat. per-dere. Spenser has for-pined, for-wasted, for-wearied
We sometimes find for joined to Romance roots, as, for fend = defend, forbid, for-bayred, barred up, debarred
From the sense of overmuch comes that of amiss, badly, in fore-speak, fore-spent.

fore- (O.E. fore, Lat. præ, before) : fore-bode, fore-cast, fore-tell, fore-said, fore-father, fore-noon, fore-sight, fore-head.

fore-gone, the p p. of fore-go (rarely used), to go before, must be distinguished from fore-go (= for-go), and fore gone (= for-gone).

gain- (O E gegn, gæn) = against. Cp. a-gain.
Gain-say, gain-stand, gain-strive, gain-giving.

Cp M E. gain-come = return, gain-sawe = contradiction ;
again was once used as a prefix Cp M E ayen-bite = remorse, ayen-byggen = redeem, ayen-wnst = counterpoise

1-, y- (O.E. ge-, M E i)   This prefix was once a sign of the pass part. as, y-clept, y-channed (Milton)
It is wrongly used in y-pointing (Milton, On Shakespeare). It enters into the composition of i wis (O E ge-wis, truly, certainly), every-where, hand-y work mis- (O E mis-), wrong, ill Cp a-mis (= on the wrong, M.E. misse wrong, injury) misbehave, mis-deed, mis lead, mis-trust, mis-take, mis-like, (in Shakespeare) has become dis-like.

For mis- in mischief, see p. 243 nether-, (O E ni-ther) = down, below : netherstocks, nether-lands

sand- (O E sám, half) sand-blind = half-blind.

"Wrinkled, sand-blind, toothless, and deformed "—Burton.

     "   Wrinkled, sand-blind, toothless, and deformed "
lanc   l e (Piers Plowman, C. Text, ix. 311, p 155)

to- (O E. to-). This is an adverbial form of two (cp Lat dis-) signifying asunder, in pieces: O.E. tobrecan = to break to pieces, to-dælan = to divide, L.E. to don, to do asunder ; to-fleon, to fly asunder ;
M E to-pullen, to pull to pieces, &c.

It sometimes has an intensitive force, and is strengthened by the adverb all (qute).

     "And all to- brake his skull "
               Judges ix 5, 3
     "Al is to- broken thilke region "
               Chaucer, Knightes Tale, l. 2759.

Go to (used as an interjection in Hamlet ι 3) seems to corre-spond to to-go = O.E. to-gân, to go away, depart, cp for-do and do-for.

For the phrase "all to," see all, § 243.

to- is the ordinary preposition "to" in to-day, to-night, to-morrow, to-gether, here-to-fore, to-ward.

un- (O.E. on-, Goth. and-, Ger. ent-) = back (with verbs): un-bind, un-do, un-fold, un-lock, un-wind.

un- (Q.E. un-) = not (with adjectives, and nouns formed from adjectives): un-true, un-wise, un-told, un just, un truth.

wan- (O E wan) wan-ing, want-ing . wan-hope = despair; wan-ton = wan toven, untrained, wild ; -toven is the O.E togen, p p. of the O E verb te on, lead, draw. Cp Ger un-ge-zogen.

with- (O E. with-, a shortened form of wi-ther), against, back. with-draw, with-hold, with-stand.

243. II Separable Particles.

Af·ter (O E. after): after-growth, after-math, after-clap, after-dinner, after-ward

All (O.E. eal): al-mighty, al-one, 1-one, 1-onely, 1-onesome, al-together, al-most, al-though, al-so, a-s

All, meaning quite, is very often joined to the adverb to (too), and was made to precede the prefix to- in composition (See to-. p 220)

> "All to dirtied"—LATIMER.
> "Au to ruffled "—MILTON.
> M E "Al to longe " > > Lyf of Beket, 774.

Forth (O E. forth)· forth-coming, forth-going for-ward (O E. forth-weard)

"From that day forthward man most nedes dele."—Trevisa.

Cp E.E forth-fare = departure, forth-gong = progress, &c

Fro, from (O E. fram, O.N. fra): fro-ward, from-ward.

In (O E. in) in-come, in-land, in-sight, in-born, in-bred, in-wardly, in-ly, in lay, in-fold, in-to.

In many verbs in has been replaced by a Romance form (en-, em-): en-dear, em-bitter.

Of (O E. of = from, off)· of-fal, off set, off-shoot, off-spring. See a-, pp. 217-8

In M E we find of-schrēden, shred off , of-smiten, smite off ; E.E. of-springen, to spring from

On (O E. on, upon, forward). on-set, on-slaught, on-ward.

Out, ut (O E ūt): out-come, out-let, out-break, out-pour, out-cast, out-joint, out-law, out-landish, out-side, out-ward, ut ter. It sometimes signifies beyond, over, as in out-bid, out-do

Over (O.E. ofer) above, beyond, exceedingly, too :—

244. SUFFIXES OF ROMANIC ORIGIN

Under the head of Romanic suffixes we must distinguish (1) those Latin suffixes that have a Norman French form, (2) those suffixes that are unchanged, being borrowed directly from the Latin language,
(3) modern French and other Romance endings of Latin origin.

Voy-age comes through N. French, its Latin form is vi-aticum. Cp. beni-son with benedic-tion, charn-el and carn-al, &c.

Liqu-our has a N. French form; liqu-eur comes to us from modern French; cp antic (N Fr), antique Fr Cavalc-ade, escap-ade, are Italian words that have come to us through the French. The true French forms are chevauch-ée and échapp-ée, other forms in -ade (originally -ado), come to us directly from the Spanish language, as crus-ade, brav-ado, torn-ado,
&c.; cp. prem-ier (Fr.), prim-ary (Lat), prim-er

(N Fr.) Many suffixes of Norman French origin have now no living power, not being used to form new derivatives

I. Noun Suffixes.

-age (Lat. -aticum), forms abstract nouns : advant-age, bever-age, cour-age, hom-age.

It sometimes denotes the place where, as in hermit-age, parson-age

Till-age and cott-age are hybrids.

-ain, -an, -en, -on (Lat. -anus) : chapl-ain, chief-ain, vill-ain, pelic-an, peas-ant, ward-en (= guard-an), sext-on (= sacrist-an), surge-on, sover-eign

Modern formations, having no corresponding Latin form in -anus, are antiquari-an, barbari-an, civili-an, grammari-an, librari-an, &c.

From modern French come artis-an, courtes-an, partis-an

-ain (Lat -aneus), appears in -mount-ain, camp-aign, champ-aign.

Abund-ance, allegi-ance, ch-ance (= cad-ence), pur-vey-ance (= provid-ence), obeis-ance (obedi-ence), prud-ence, sci-ence, &c.

-ancy, -ency, are new formations from the Latin
-antia, -entia, becoming (1) -antie, -entie, (2) -ancie,
-encie, &c., brilli-ancy, excell-ency, &c.

sé-ance is from modern French.

-and, -end (Lat. -andus, -endus), are gerundial suffixes :—

(1) Garl-and, vi-and, leg-end, prov-end-er.

./?) Memor-andum retains its Latin form ; (3) preb-end, reprimand, are directly from Modern French

-ar, -er, -or (Lat. -arium), marks the place where; it enters into the name of some common objects :—

(1) Cell-ar, mort-ar, chart-er, dow-er, sampl-er, garn-er, lard-er, sauc-er, man-or.

(2) -ary (Lat. -arium), gran-ary, (= garn-er), aviary, semin-ary, viv-ary.

In M E. we find O Fr. -aire in sal-arie, seyntu-arie (sanctuary), lettu-arie = electuary.

(1) -ar, -er, -or (Lat. -arius), marks the agent :
calend-ar, vic-ar, arch-er, butch-er, butl-er, carpenter, farri-er, messeng-er, treasur-er, bachel-or, chan-cell-or, coun-sell-or.

(2) -ary (Lat. -arius) advers-ary, secret-ary, &c.

Commiss-arie = commissary, not-arie = not-ary, are met with in M.E. and the suffix is owing to the O Fr -aire, not -arie See -ry, p 230.

-ard (Low Lat. -ardus, Ger. -hart, Eng. hard) · cow-ard, dull-ard, nigg-ard, buzz-ard, tank-ard, &c.

Latin atonic -ina disappeared in Old French, hence English dame, page; Modern French has reintroduced it under the form, -ine, whence our machine.

in (Lat. -inem)· marg-in, ərig-in, virg-in.

-ism (Lat. -ismus, Gr. -ισμος)· de-ism, fatal-ism, ego-t-ism. Many are direct from the Greek, as bar-bar-ism, lacon-ism.

No words of N.Fr. origin end in -ism. Cp. M E. sophime := sophism.

-ist (Lat. -ista, Gr. ι̯-τής): bapt-ist, evangel-ist, chor-ist-er; M.E. soph-ist-er = soph-ist.

More recent forms are dent-ist, de-ist, exorc-ist, flor-ist, medall-ist, novel-ist, and numerous others.

-ite (Lat. -ita, Fr. -ite) forms patronymics : Israel-ite, Jesu-it.

-id (Lat. -id-, Gr. -ιδ-, Fr. -ide): Æne-id, Nere-id. Many modern chemical words end in -id, as alkalo-id.

-le (Lat. -ulus, -ula, -ulum): fab-le, tab-le, stab-le, peop-le, with preceding c (which is sometimes lost), we have artic-le, mirac-le, pinnac-le, obstac-le, appar-el, dams-el, fenn-el, lent-il, parc-el (= partic-le), penc-il, per-il.

Modern forms in -bule, -cle, -cule, are borrowed directly from the Latin

-l-ence (Lat. -l-entia) forms abstract nouns   There are very few of these forms in M.E.   We find pesti-lence and vio-lence, other forms are quite recent.   See -lent, p. 234.

-lency is sometimes found for -lence, like -ency for -ence.

-let. See -et, p. 226.

-m, -me (Lat -men). char-m, real-m, cri-me, nou-n, re-now-n, leav-en (= Lat. leva-men, Fr. lev-ain).

-me, the modern French form is contained in alu-m, legu-me, volu-me, regi-me.

-men, the original Lat form, is retained in all later loans, as acu-men, bitu-men, &c.

-m, -me (Lat -ma, Gr. -μα): baptis-m, phanto-m (= phantas-m), the-me.

From modern French we have borrowed diade-m, anagra-m, emble-m, proble-m.

From the Greek we get anagra-m, epigra-m, paradig-m, pano-ra-ma, enthusias-m, pleonas-m, telegram.

-ment (Lat. -mentum). argu-ment, command-ment, enchant-ment, gar-ment, nourish-ment, oint-ment, parliament.

It is added to Teutonic words, as, acknowledge-ment, atone-ment, bereave-ment, fulfil-ment, &c.

-mony (Lat -mon-ıu-m, -mon-ıa) cere-mony, matrı-mony, testı-mony.

SCIENCE PRIMERS FOR ELEM.... \\ SCHOOLS

The necessity of commencing the teaching of Science in Schools at an early stage of the pupil's course has now become generally acknowledged and is enforced in all Schools under Government inspection. For the purpose of facilitating the introduction of Science Teaching into Elementary Schools Messrs Macmillan are now publishing a New Series of Science Primers under the joint Editorship of Professors HUXLEY, ROSCOE, and BALFOUR STEWART. The object of these Primers is to convey information in such a manner as to make it both intelligible and useful to pupils in the most elementary classes. They are clearly printed in good paper and illustrated wherever they are necessary to the proper understanding of the text. The following are just published

PRIMER OF CHEMISTRY By H. E ROSCOE Professor of Chemistry in Owens College, Manchester 18mo. 1s Third Edition.

PRIMER OF PHYSICS By BALFOUR STEWART Professor of Natural Philosophy in Owens College, Manchester, 18mo 1s Third Edition

PRIMER OF PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY By ARCHIBALD GEIKIE F R S Murchison Professor of Geology and Mineralogy at Edinburgh Second Ed t on 18mo 1s

Everyone ought to know something about the air we breathe the earth we live upon and about the creatures between them and let s work this author makes to show what sort of questions says just about some of the chief parts of the book of nature, and especially about two of them—the Air and the Earth The 4 vagms of the book are as follows — The Shape of the Earth—Day and Night—The Air—The Circulation of Water on the Land—The Sea—The Inside of the Earth.

PRIMER OF GEOLOGY By PROFESSOR GEIKIE, F R S With numerous Illustrations Second Edition. 18mo. cloth 1s

In these Primers the authors have aimed not so much to give information as to endeavour to discipline the mind in a way which has not hitherto been customary, by bringing it into immediate contact with Nature herself For this purpose a series of simple experiments to be performed by the teacher, has been devised looking up to the capacity of each Science Thus the power of observation on the pupil will be awakened while strengthened Esc Mankind is cogently illustrated, and depended are like of all the necessary appropriate, with prompt directions as to how they may be observed Professor Huxley's introductory volume has been delayed through the illness of the author, but it is now expected to appear very shortly They are wonderfully clear and lucid in their instruction, simple in style, and admirable in their...

"I have, I hope," the author says, "shown that at a gl-- each children, from the very first, to distinguish true history with -- --gend and from vulgar invention, and also to understand the natur-- of historical authorities and to weigh one statement against another I have throughout striven to connect the history of England with the general history of civilised Europe, and I have especially tried to make the book serve as an incentive to a more accurate study of historical geography" In the present edition the whole has been carefully revised, and such improvements as suggested themselves have been introduced.
"The book indeed is full of instruction and interest to students of all ages, and he must be a well informed man indeed who will not rise from its perusal with clearer and more accurate ideas of a too much neglected portion of English History —SPECTATOR.

Historical Course for Schools—Edited by EDWARD
A FREEMAN, D C L , late Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford.
The object of the present series is to put forth clear and correct views of history in simple language and in the smallest space and cheapest form in which it could be done   It is meant in the first place for Schools , but it is often found that a book for schools proves useful for other readers as well and it is hoped that this may be the case with the little books the first instalment of which is now given to the world The General Sketch will be followed by a series of special histories of particular countries which will take for granted the main principles laid down in the General Sketch   In every case the results of the latest historical research will be given in as simple a form as may be, and the several numbers of the series will all be so far under the supervision of the Editor as to secure gener-- curacy of statement and a general harmony of plan and senti-- but each book will be the original work of its author, who be responsible for his own treatment of smaller details.
    The first volume is meant to be introductory to the whole course. It is intended to give, as its name implies a general sketch of the history of the civilised world, that is, of Europe, and of the lands which have drawn their civilisation from Europe Its object is to trace out the general relations of different periods and different countries to one another, without --ong minutely into the affairs of any particular country   That short object of the first volume is, for without clear notions of general history, the history of particular countries can never be rightly understood The narrative extends from the earliest monuments of the Aryan peoples, d--n to the latest events both on the Eastern and Western Continents. The book consists of seventeen moderately sized chapters, each chapter being divided into a number of short numbered paragraphs, each with a title prefixed clearly indicative of the subject of the paragraph

" Though mainly intended for young readers they will, if set methodi- cally be found very acceptable to those of more mature years, and the life and reality imparted to the dry bones of history cannot fail to be attractive to readers of every age —JOHN BULL

Abbott (Rev. E. A.)—BIBLE LESSONS   By the Rev
  E A ABBOTT M A , Head Master of the City of London School
  Second Edition   Crown 8vo   4s 6d
" Wise, suggestive and really profound instruction into religious thought " —GUARDIAN   " I think nobody could read them without being both the better for them himself and being also able to see how this difficult chapimparting a sound religious education may be effected —BISHOP OF DAVID'S AT ABERGWILLY

Arnold — A BIBLE READING   FOR SCHOOLS   The GREAT PROPHECY OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION (Isaiah, Chapters 40—66)   Arranged and Edited for Young Learners   By MATT THEW ARNOLD   D C L , formerly Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford, and Fellow of Oriel   Third Edition   18mo cloth   1s
" There can be no doubt that it will be found excellently calculated to further instruction in Biblical literature in any school into which it may be introduced   and we can safely say that whatever school uses the book it will enable its pupils to understand Isaiah a great advantage compared with other establishments which do not avail themselves of it —TIMES
' Mr Arnold has done the greatest possible service to the public   We never read any translation of Isaiah which quiterfered to Bible with the musical rhythm and associations of our English Bible translation while so so much to display the musing links in the connection of the text —
